HUGE LIQUOR SYNDICATE REVEALED

EXPERTS DIVIDED ON FUTURE OF MARKET; PROSPERITY TO TELL

Stocks Will Swing With Industrial Conditions

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. — Within the past three weeks, five of the "big names" in American financial and economic circles have been heard from, in no indefinite terms, with respect to past, present and possible future actions of the stock market. Speculators on both sides of the fence have their ears ready to catch a word that mignt substantiate their position in the market, or direct their buying and selling activities over the balance of the year.

Roger Babson, the sage of Wellesley Hills, is a statistician and forecaster of high repute, with an enormous following among bankers, security experts, insurance company officials, as well as plain, ordinary citizens with speculative leanings. Mr. Babson told us a few weeks ago of an impending crash in the market, compared with which former smashes in security values did not deserve to reckon. The early-October break of mild proportions followed immediately the Babson blast.

Arthur Cutten of Chicago, a comparatively late addition to the ranks of American capitalists, and whose opinion on stock values is eagerly sought on any and all occasions, took issue with Babson. Mr. Cutten backed up his statement by the assertion that he had not sold a share of stock, and would continue to accumulate rather than to dispose of stock.

Mr. Cutten may therefore be rated a bull, but not a market operator in the general accepted sense of that term. He is a long-pull investor in equity stocks of American corporations and must therefore think in terms of the distant future rather than next week or next month.

Profesor Irving Fisher of Yale University, also a widely-quoted economist of note, may be listed as the perpetual challenger of the bearish statements of Babson and others, since, whenever such statements are broadcasted, Mr. Fisher is Johnny-on-the-spot to present his side of the story. In brief the Yale professor, while deprecating the enormous amount of margin speculating now going on, says there is no likelihood of a stock market break of major proportions.

Of a distinctly different type are Charles E. Mitchell, the head of the world's largest banking institution and Leonard P. Ayers, of the Clevelad Trust Company, both of whom have gained a reputation for uncanny accuracy in security market forecasts. Mr. Mitchell has

TWO CHICAGO BOMBS BRING TOTAL TO 104

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Following a blast in a restaurant and another in a garage, Cook County counted its bombs today and found that it has had a total of 104 since January 1.

One of the bombs last night tore away the rear stairs of the Golden Lily Cafe and spread terror among the customers. The damage was estimated at $1,500. Labor trouble was said by police to have been the cause.

The other exploded in a four-car garage at Oak Park, a suburb. This was the third of such blasts within a four block radius in the last ten weeks.

When the maiden trip is completed the plane will start a regular weekly service between New York and Buenos Aires on a seven day schedule for the trip.

Second Mate Now Involved In Probe of Kraft Death

NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct. 17.—Capt. E. W. Sundstrom of the steamship Creole today had balked the efforts of District Attorney Leander Perez and Sheriff Alberti to secure Second Officer John McGouldrick, sought in connection with the mysterious murder of Jack Kraft, New York newspaperman.

Sheriff Alberti swore out a warrant for the arrest of McGouldrick but when he sent his deputy aboard the Creole at Pilot Town last night Captain Sundstrom refused to give up the second mate, claiming he could not proceed to sea without a second officer under maritime law.

"If you want McGouldrick you will have to take him off the ship at New York," said Capt. Sundstrom. As a result the Creole, the ship from which Kraft was reported to have leaped to his death into the Mississippi, is sailing with the second officer aboard.

McGouldrick's arrest was ordered after the district attorney was handed a letter purported to have been written by Ione Ord, New York artist and traveling companion of Kraft to McCormick.

The letter, according to the district attorney, read:

"Mac: Though I didn't see you even to say goodbye, and things look pretty black, my promise still holds. I haven't changed my mind. Remain the same on the subject we talked about at the hotel the last evening I saw you and as soon as I am cleared of all this I'll write you and we can make plans."

Miss Ord and Sam Epstein, ship's steward, both of whom are held, were taken to Nairn to view Kraft's body. Authorities admitted both had been given a stiff grilling.

Kraft at first was reported to have leaped overboard and drowned, but an inquest revealed he had been shot through the heart and had died before his body reached the water.

OTTAWA RECEIVES BRITISH PREMIER

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 17.— This dominion capital was keenly stirred today in anticipation of the visit of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, who was expected to arrive here this morning from Toronto.

Mr. MacDonald's stay here is expected to be the high point in his tour of Canada before returning to England from his good-will mission to the United States.

Soon after his arrival he will confer with Mackenzie King, prime minister of Canada and other dominion officials. Following these conferences, he is expected to make an important announcement relative to some practical measures affecting the doctrine of "freedom of the seas" which he discussed with President Hoover at Washington.

COMEDIAN ENDS LIFE

A COMEDIAN on the stage, William Bucklin Merriam, 49, 708 N. 31st St., Billings, Mont., member of a vaudeville troupe playing an engagement at the village opera house in Osborn, enacted a tragic role when he committed suicide by blowing out his brains with a bullet fired from a .32 caliber revolver at 4:30 p. m., Wednesday.

Merriam left a farewell note, written on a large piece of cardboard, in which he blamed his wife, Eva, for the act and gave a hint that the "eternal triangle" may have been indirectly the cause.

The note, addressed to his wife, read: "Dear Eva—You can take the blame for all this. Davenport must know who is the cause." The message was signed "Bill" and underneath the signature Merriam added: "Take care of my kids," again signing his name.

A store room on the second floor of the opera house was the scene of the shooting. The shot was heard by Gilbert Howard, a member of the troupe who was back-stage and who discovered the body slumped in a corner. Beside the body was the note and under the right hand was a revolver.

Coroner Chambliss learned that Merriam's wife had left him several hours previously. Her destination was some city in Illinois, where she was expected to arrive Thursday.

The coroner interprets the note to indicate the two had quarreled earlier in the day and that another man whose first or last name is Davenport, had replaced Merriam in his wife's affections.

Merriam had packed several trunks and apparently had planned to follow his wife, according to Coroner Chambliss.

The troupe had been presenting daily shows at the opera house for several days and a performance was supposed to have been given Wednesday evening. It was called off.

The body was taken in charge by Morris and Sons, Osborn funeral directors, and an attempt will be made to communicate with the widow in Illinois.

Coroner Chambliss intends to make a further investigation of the case, he said.

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT TO COST $40.000,000 NEXT YEAR

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Prohibition enforcement will cost Uncle Sam approximately $40,000,000 next year, according to 1931 budget figures virtually approved today.

While the coast guard appropriation has not been finally determined, the total sum for enforcement to be allocated to the various agencies will not be much different than last year, although some increases were sought. The budget bureau made cuts wherever possible, since President Hoover urged that the total appropriations be kept as low as possible.

The prohibition bureau proper has been allowed about $15,000,000, the customs bureau $12,000,000, while the coast guard will get from $28,000,000 to $30,000,000, about half of which goes toward anti-smuggling operations against rum runners. About $1,500,000 of the customs service appropriation will be devoted to prohibition work.

An additional $10,000,000 will be used in prohibition enforcement by the various branches of the department of justice, principally in offices of the United States attorneys and in the upkeep of federal prisoners.

The 1930 budget carries $28,000,000 for the coast guard, but some additional funds may be authorized for cutters. A program of building ten cutters, principally to replace those which are becoming obsolete, is about completed. Five have been put in service, three are under construction and bids will be taken on the ninth within a short time.

GRAND JURY PROBES ACCUSATIONS MADE ABOUT INSTITUTIONS

Welfare Worker Is Heard; Mrs. Elton Denies Charges

DELAWARE, O., Oct. 17.—The Delaware County grand jury, which is probing alleged cruelty, immorality, drinking and the theft of state property at the Girls' Industrial School, near here, entered the second day of its special session today.

Only one witness was called yesterday. Mrs. Ida McCorkie, of Circleville, who is said to have been an employe of the state welfare department, went before the jurors and she was questioned for more than two hours.

Information she gave the deliberating body could not be learned. Every precaution has been taken to guard against any leakage of news from the grand jury room.

W. W. Hill, Delaware County's youthful prosecutor, is leading the investigation. It was he who started the probe by his statements that he had heard of irregularities at the girl's correctional school.

Mrs. J. P. Elton, matron of the home, has denied all charges which have been made and said the reports were started by disgruntled discharged employes.

GASTONIA TRIAL REACHES JURY SOON

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 17. — The fate of Fred Erwin Beal, generalissimo of the Gastonia strike, and six of his aides, charged with murdering Police Chief O. F. Aderholt and the wounding of three other officers probably will be decided Saturday.

The voluminous testimony that has required more than two weeks to be presented was concluded yesterday. Today and tomorrow — probably the final days of the lengthy trial—will be consumed by summations before the jury composed largely of farmers.

All arguments must be concluded by Friday night as Judge M. V. Barnhill has limited each side to six hours. Whether Judge Barnhill will make his charge Friday night or wait until Saturday morning is not known.

EARL SANDE TAKES SINGING LESSONS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Earl Sande, the country's premier jockey, is taking singing lessons from a capital music teacher, presumably with the idea of doing concert work when his turf days are over.

"Earl has a beautiful tenor," said Miss Estelle Wentworth, his teacher. "He has a better voice than nine out of ten who have been training for years."

COOLIDGE, SMITH, ROSENWALD MANAGE HUGE CHARITY FUND

"Labor Of Love" Brings Three Colorful Men Together

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. — Calvin Coolidge, Alfred E. Smith and Julius Rosenwald are working together on what Smith today termed "a labor of love for us three." It is the administration of an $8,000,000 fund left by Conrad Hubert, pioneer manufacturer.

An announcement is to be made soon giving details of the fund and its method of administration. Mr. Coolidge, Republican and a Protestant; Mr. Smith, Democrat and a Roman Catholic, and Mr. Rosenwald, a philanthropist of the Jewish faith, have been meeting at luncheon in the financial district here about once a month since July. At these meetings, described by Smith as "most delightful," they have discussed best methods for administering the fund.

Mr. Coolidge Mr. Smith and Mr. Rosenwald have been co-operating with the Bankers Trust Company on details of the fund.

WORK OF ADJUSTING VARIOUS VIEWS ON ARMAMENT STARTS

Greasing Skids For Conference Is Important Task

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—With all of the powers on record today as willing to participate in the London naval conference, the really important and highly delicate part of the undertaking is to get under way immediately. This involves the adjustment of divergent views, and the ironing out of as many obstacles as possible before the conference actually meets.

It is still three months before the delegates assemble in London. This period is considered here as a sort of diplomatic interlude, a period of careful preparation and adjustment.

Just as Great Britain and the United States were able, by private negotiation, to settle virtually all their differences before the invitations went out, so are Premier MacDonald and President Hoover hopeful that the same private negotiation in the next three months will see Franco-Italian differences yield to adjustment, and many of the obstacles cleared away that now loom so menacingly in the pathway of the conference.

In the British call for the conference, all of the powers were invited to utilize this three months' period for an exchange of opinion between themselves. All of them took note of it and accepted. Consequently the next three months are going to witness a vast amount of private dickering in London, Paris, and Rome.

ROME FLYERS TRY NON-STOP FLIGHT

ROME, Oct. 17. — Commander Maddalena and Lieut. Ceconi, famous Italian fliers, today took off in a Savoia-Marchetti plane in an attempt to establish a new world's record for a non-stop, non-refueling flight.

The present record of sixty-five hours and twenty-five minutes is held by the German aviators, Risticz and Zimmerman.

In today's flight, Maddalena is preparing for a projected trans-Atlantic flight to New York in the middle of November, it was said.

Four other planes are also being groomed here for trans-Atlantic flights as General Italo Balbo, minister of aeronautics, is anxious to keep his promise to Lewis Yancey and Roger Q. Williams, to return the air visit of the Americans.

Luncheon Clubs Sponsor Visit Of Planes Here

Operating under the direction of the American Society for Promotion of Aviation, four green and gold airplanes of the Empire Air Circus, now on national tour to stimulate interest in aviation, will stage a three-day series of demonstrations in Xenia, it was announced today.

According to advance representatives, the personnel of the organization will have headquarters at the J. Weir Cooper farm field, Dayton Pike, just west of the city, next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Xenia Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs are jointly sponsoring the visit to Xenia.

A comprehensive program, which will include the dropping of prizes and free tickets, noon exhibitions over the city, and free demonstrations at the Cooper field, has been arranged. Details will be announced later.

Not only will residents of Xenia and vicinity have an opportunity to watch famous pilots at their work, but also will have a chance to "fly at cost"—the lowest rate in history. The nominal fee is made possible by the leasing and subsidization of the Empire planes by the aviation society. Heads of the society believe that the best way to "sell" aviation is to get as many persons off the ground as possible.

The program will open at noon Wednesday, shortly after the planes and equipment arrive here from Mansfield.

Flying in diamond and line formation, the pilots will send their ships zooming over the city. There will be vertical banks, "grape-vines", mass loops, reversements and other military and commercial maneuvers.

Then each pilot will unleash his own bag of tricks. The stunts will include practically every one known to aviation.

Each afternoon at the Cooper field there will be aerial acrobatics, stunt flying, "dead stick" landings and parachute jumps, all designed to show the safety of aviation.

There will be no admission or parking charges for these exhibitions, and the public is invited to the field, which will be properly policed to protect all spectators from injury.

The Empire Air Circus has been on tour for the past three months, and has visited twenty-five cities, giving eighty-five exhibitions before almost a million persons and carrying more than 35,000 passengers.

The airplanes coming here were manufactured according to United States Department of Commerce specifications, and subsequently were licensed. None is more than three months old.

The famous Whirlwind motors, of the type used by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in spanning the Atlantic; by Commander Byrd in topping the North Pole, and by the Southern Cross in her epochal trip to Australia, power the airplanes.

Oil Magnate Takes Stand With Wife In Bribe Case

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.— The jury sitting in the Fall bribery case will hear the story today of how "one old friend came to loan another $100,000."

E. L. Doheny, California oil magnate, and his wife will take the witness stand and give their version of the transaction with Former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall which the government charges was a bribe to induce the ex-official to lease the Elk Hills naval oil reserve.

They will further explain to the jury that the note Fall gave for the money was mutilated to the extent of having his signature torn off because they feared they might both be killed simultaneously in a railroad wreck and they didn't want any foreclosure on their old friend at a time he couldn't repay.

And when their direct examination at the hands of Frank J. Hogan, chief defense attorney, has been concluded, Doheny will be subjected to a gruelling cross-examination by Prosecutor Owen J. Robert in an effort to ascertain why he remained silent for several months when the United States senate was trying to find out where Fall got the $100,000.

PROBE ATTENDANCE OF PAID LOBBYIST AT SECRET MEETING

Senator's Secretary Is Representative Of Manufacturers

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—The peculiar circumstances under which Charles L. Eyanson, a paid manufacturers agent, attended secret sessions of the senate finance committee while it fixed rates in the new tariff bill, will be aired by the senate's lobby investigating committee.

While lobbies have flourished in Washington for many decades, official records disclose no parallel to the Eyanson case. He attended the finance committee's secret sessions for two days as the apparent secretary to Senator Hiram Bingham (R) of Connecticut. When other Republican senators learned his identity, he was unceriminously expelled. In the meantime, he drew government pay as a clerk to Bingham's senatorial committee and an annual salary from the Connecticut Manufacturers Association.

Eyanson was called as a witness, along with Robert C. Buell, secretary-treasurer of the Connecticut association, to learn more about his tariff activities in and out of the secret tariff sessions. The investigators wanted, too, to learn the truth about reports that Eyanson even helped to fix certain rates in the new bill.

MASONS END MEET

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 17.—The delegates of the 127th annual communication of the grand lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of Ohio, are enroute to their homes today following the concluding business session late last night.

J. P. McCune, of Columbus, was elevated from venerable vice president to president of the order.

FEDERAL RAIDS MAY CAUSE "FAMINE"; CAPTURE FORTRESS

"Manny" Kessler Held; Ring Operated Own Radio Station

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—One of the biggest liquor smuggling syndicates operating since the Volstead law went into effect was broken up today as a result of a spectacular offensive by the federal government. Thirty-five raids were carried out simultaneously along a 200-mile "front" extending from Atlantic City to the eastern tip of Long Island.

Thirty-two persons were arrested, including Emanuel ("Manny") Kessler, who at one time was known as "the king of the bootleggers." It was believed that "Manny," a picturesque and colorful character, had retired after "doing a stretch" in the Atlanta federal pentientiary five years ago with other infamous American bootleggers.

The liquor "ring," which supplied booze to the entire East, had its headquarters in a mansion on an estate at Highlands, N. J., which had been fortified with ammunition, firearms nad machine gun emplacements. It was honeycombed with underground vaults and passages in which huge quantities of wines and liquor were stored.

The liquor syndicate operated a fleet of rum ships between the Atlantic coast and St. Pierre Miquelon, off Canada, and also to and from Bermuda. The radio operator at the stronghold of the bootleggers at Highlands was "talking" with one of the ring's big freighters, bringing in 5,000 cases of "good Canadian liquor" at the time the raids were staged.

Seized in his fortress known as "The Mansion" to the people of Highlands, "Manny" Kessler, a squat, little man, smiled genially but refused to talk. Neither he nor his companions captured at headquarters made any attempt to resist arrest. Malcolm McMaster, radio operator, would not talk, either. One of Kessler's well-known lieutenants, Morris Sweetwood, was also taken into custody, as was Patrick Conners, a clerk in a swanky Atlantic City hotel.

The wholesale raids are of such major importance that New York City is now facing a "booze famine," it was admitted by night club owners here. The raids were the result of weeks of careful planning and were participated in by seventy-five treasury agents, thirty-five deputy United States marshals and twenty New Jersey state troopers.

The machinery of the syndicate was geared to smuggle in as much as 10,000 cases of liquor a week, according to unofficial estimates. In cut form, as the booze reaches the consumer, it would be double that amount. And on the basis of present retail prices this quantity would mean a turnover of $1,000,000 a week, although the wholesale price charged by the ring would be much lower. The syndicate is believed to have supplied the bulk of liquor to New York and, in fact, to the entire northeast.

Federal officials say the personnel of the organization included skippers and seamen to man their fleet of vessels, men to handle the cargoes, "contact men" in charge of the speed boat fleet, truckmen, chauffeurs, warehouse operatives, wireless operators, office executives, salesmen, sales managers,

TAX AMENDMENT IS URGED AT MEETING

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 17.—Adoption of the proposed "limited taxation" amendment to the Ohio constitution is essential, if Buckeye state tax payers are to escape double taxation, L. B. Palmer, president of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation told the annual convention of the Ohio Building and Loan Association here last night. The convention is still in session today.

Governor Myers Y. Cooper, who also spoke at the opening of the conclave, warned his hearers against risking money in speculation ventures, such as the stock market, and advised investing it in real estate and other sound industries.

Reports from district representatives of the Building and Loan Association declared that business was "good" throughout Ohio. Among those who made the optimistic predictions of good business were Fred W. Arnold, Bellefontaine, George Ralston, Martins Ferry, and George Garthe, Lorain.

The convention is to close tomorrow afternoon.

SCHOOL'S "B AD BOY" WILL BE REFORMED

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 17.—Bert, the "bad boy" of South St. school, is going to be reformed.

Science is going to try its hand. Thirty years ago, Bert would have been flogged for the tricks he pulled.

Bert is the fifth grade "terror" in the school. He carries a knife and brandishes it at the other pupils. Once he stabbed a boy's hand with it, pushing the blade through his victim's palm.

Five teachers have "mixed" with Bert and have had scratches and bruises to show for the fights. Bert, laboring under some strange hallucination that he's the original "bad boy" even "put up his dukes," as he said it, with the principal of the school.

In his more peaceful moments, he contents himself with sitting at his desk in the school room, rolling back his lips and grinding his teeth, which sends chills right up and down the backs of other pupils. He is the most expert "paperwad" shooter.

Bert was hauled into juvenile court here yesterday. He didn't seem much impressed and even had the boldness to grind his teeth at the judge.

The judge, had he been sitting in court thirty years ago, would probably have ordered Bert to a reform school, but he told juvenile authorities to place him under observation here.

Bert's tonsils and his adenoids will be taken out and other minor operations will be performed. He'll be made healthy and then his young brain will be given a chance to function normally.

Bert, the "bad boy" of South St. school is going to be reformed.

FOR WOMEN OF PERSONALITY

What a marvelous time the woman of fashion will have selecting her new fur coat for the incoming winter season. Never have fur coats shown such style variety, such clever combinations, such dramatic silhouettes. The coats this year were designed for women of personality for they are so individual in their styling, so much more feminine throughout.

The new fur coats are handled with the same graceful ease that is to be found in coats of satin and velvet. The manufacturers have gone to no ends to make the collection of fur coats for the season an unusually interesting one. They endorse, as does Paris, any number of silhouettes, princess lines, ripple flares, flounces and irregular hem lines are outstanding features.

Individuality Essential

Paris tells us individuality is absolutely essential in our new fur coat if we are to stand out from the mob, for women everywhere are demanding something new and something different in fur coat fashions and the stores and shops are ready. Never have we seen such a luxurious array of beautiful fur coats. It seems to us that there was a lot of attention paid to caracul.

Caracul Smart

One particularly interesting caracul coat was of the natural tip brown shade and this supple fur appears in a convertible swagger flared coat which may also be worn wrapped closely about the figure in the manner so much desired by the smart sophisticate with a flare for elegance, we saw a model favoring the flared line in a side movement with insertions of fullness outlined by lapp seams accented by a partial border of that heavenly silver fox.

New Hemlines

Now that we are on the subject of hemlines, we might as well tell you all about everything that we saw that was particularly new and particularly different. There was an ermine coat that had a band of the fur two skins wide gathered in a narrow ruffle outlining the bottom of the coat and reappearing about the wrists.

We loved this coat and wish that we had been born rich so that we might have taken it away before some lucky person sees it for it is a perfect dream and we want to say one more thing about the hemline of another coat we saw and then we are through with hemlines This was a broadtail and had a shallow border which lengthens in four points.

Broadtail Smart

Black broadtail and gray broadtail put in a very bold appeaarnce this fall for they seem quite satisfied with themselves and from all we can gather, they will be very important furs. On some coats we saw adorable little ties of the fur at one side or at the side back. For the woman who is not slender the flat jabot collar is no doubt designed. It is particularly flattering in a fur such as caracul, broadtail or ermine.

No End of Collars

There seems to be no end to collars made of contrasting furs These furs are combined in narrow borders or with fitted intersections of the coat fur and collars For instance, beige ermine trimmed a brown Alaska seal. There is something very satisfactory and chic as well about the coat entirely of one fur.

A Russian Fitch Coat

One particularly smart coat of this type is of natural Russian fitch. The skins were beautifully worked together in a manner which created a narrow border of deep brown about the hem. Other coats of one fur that are always nice and always in fashion are black caracul, leopard and leopard cat, muskrat Persian lamb, raccoon of course and Hudson seal.

News of Sports Furs

Sports furs are expected to receive no end of popularity for their intelligent combination of furs and of colors achieving a smart variety yet retaining a slender silhouette. We noticed geometric motifs, diagonals and pointed lines in decorative patterns. We noticed too in the sport furs that the severity of the boyish fashions is noticeable by its absence. The coats are softly feminine.

Furs may come and furs may go but the luxurious ermine goes on forever holding the very highest place in fur fashions for evening We saw some perfectly breath-taking wraps of wide beige and summer ermine, sometimes alone and again richly elaborated with foxes and sables.

The variety of silhouettes of these beautiful evening wraps is a very interesting one. Three-quarter length or the elegant sweeping fashion of hemlines lengthened at the back almost touching the heels are two important styles.

If you are anything like we are you will find it difficult to keep from buying several coats if for no other reason than for their lovely linings for there is an individuality of design and elaborate detail that we have never seen before at any time or any place.

Gorgeous Linings

Heavy flat crepe is often combined with transparent velvet in softly blended colors and appliques of rich coloring trim black satin linings. The decorative motifs being for the most part of transparent velvet. There are many gorgeously employed designs combined with appliques forming some very elaborate linings and yet they are not too elaborate to be in very excellent taste.

And so when you set about on your hunt for a new fur coat for the new season, we are sure you will enjoy yourselves just as we did and we hope that our resume here will help you in selecting your new coat.

EXPECT 16,000 TO MIGRATE FOR GAME

COLUMBUS, Oct. 17.— More than 16,000 Ohioans are scheduled to leave the home state tomorrow and Saturday to witness the annual Ohio State-Michigan football classic which has come to be regarded as a tradition by the two universities.

This year Ohio State beards the Wolverine in its den at Ann Arbor, Saturday, Oct. 19.

The impending tussle is the twenty-sixth between the two schools and the twelfth since Ohio State entered the Big Ten. Not counting 1918, which was an unofficial year, Michigan has won six games to State's four.

All seats for the game have been reported sold for some days and the annual capacity crowd is expected.

When BABIES are upset

Baby ills and ailments seem twice as serious at night. A sudden cry may mean colic. Or a sudden attack of diarrhea—a condition it is always important to check quickly. How would you meet this emergency—tonight? Have you a bottle of Castoria ready? There is nothing that can take the place of this harmless but effective remedy for children; nothing that acts quite the same, or has quite the same comforting effect on them.

For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old, reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an everyday aid. Its gentle influence will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. Its mild regulation will help an older child whose tongue is coated because of sluggish bowels. All druggists have Castoria; the genuine bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper.

No More "Iron Maidens"!

AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

Never again need scientific research grope in darkened cellars behind doors bolted against torture. AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE has swept before it the ignorant barrier which stupidly impeded men of genius and science marches proudly on.

"toasting did it"—

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

No Throat Irritation—No Cough.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

ILLINOIS CONGRESSWOMAN TO TRY AND ELIMINATE DENEEN

By F. J. CIPRIANI
Central Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Two's a crowd when it comes to getting a job constitutionally meant for one, and from now on the task of shoving Charles S. Deneen off his senatorial seat belongs mainly to Ruth Hanna McCormick.

And if anybody can jostle that suave ex-governor of Illinois from his Washington perch, it is this daughter of an illustrious Ohioan, the famed "maker of presidents." She has the indelible mark of Hanna in her blood. Senatorial life has been hers since the hey-day of the late Senator Mark Hanna, and was ended only with the defeat in 1924 of her husband, the late Senator Medill McCormick.

The Illinois office is available only to one. Congresswoman McCormick wants it, so does Senator Deneen, and one or the other, not forgetting several more aspirants, must be eliminated. Thus it is that two's too many, and Mrs. McCormick doesn't propose to be crowded.

She announced her candidacy for the Republican nomination against Deneen the other night, and at the same time declared her campaign would be "bunkless." Nor does she intend to make a "frill and frock" appeal to her sex. She insists her political fight is not a feminist movement. Mrs. McCormick undoubtedly will be a most formidable foe for the senatorial incumbent despite the sentiment in southern Illinois which is expressed in the provincial words of a downstater thusly; "We won't vote fer no skirt."

Mrs. McCormick is a vote getter and received 1,711,651 votes in her successful bid for congressman-at-large last year. This remarkable showing has not been overlooked by Senator Deneen or Lieut. Governor Fred E. Sterling and former Attorney General Leonard J. Brundage, the latter two a pair of potential candidates.

Illinois is keenly interested in Mrs. McCormick's efforts, and it would not be strange if this state, which has produced everything from Herrin riots to Abraham Lincoln, should send a woman to the senatorial halls of congress.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

ANNOUNCING THE PRINCE OF PEACE— And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.—Luke 2:13, 14.

THE MISSISSIPPI MUDDLE

The Mississippi flood control program enacted by congress sixteen months ago has met with so much opposition from its beneficiaries that Mr. Hoover has suggested the suspension of activities in the lower flood zones pending a resurvey of the control problem. At least one of its several floodway projects is tied up in federal courts. Another is threatened with court action if it is not modified to suit the affected communities. A third has caused much local grumbling. The farmers of a fourth flood basin want to know why the army plan overlooked them and are ready to march on Washington to find out. About all the Jones-Reid control bill has accomplished to date is to create opposition among the very people it was intended to help.

All this might have been expected, when congress surrendered to the flood states and substituted the Jones-Reid bill for the administration flood control bill. The engineering features of the two measures were not dissimilar. They were based on the so-called "Jadwin plan." The vital difference between the two bills lay in the elimination by the Jones-Reid bill of the principle of local contribution by affected communities, which the administration bill featured. The argument by which Mr. Coolidge supported the application of this principle to flood control was that it was "extremely important" that those requesting improvements should be charged with some responsibility for their cost and "the neighborhood where works are constructed (should) have a pecuniary interest in preventing waste and extravagance and securing a wise and economical expenditure of public funds." The Jones-Reid bill threw virtually the entire responsibilty and cost on the federal government, whose income is obtained largely from states unaffected by the proposed flood control works. When the bill reached Mr. Coolidge he is said to have signed it "without comment."

The neighborhoods where the works are to be constructed, which no longer have a pecuniary interest in economy, are running true to form, as doubtless Mr. Coolidge, who understands human nature, was confident they would. They are demanding that the control plan be modified to suit their local needs or whims, whatever the cost, which in any event they will not have to meet. Among these protestants doubtless are many honest men. A lot of them, however, admittedly are "gougers," who saw the national treasury successfully raided sixteen months ago and are now hoping to hold it up on their own account. The principle of sole federal responsibility for flood control in any part of the country is vicious; and the implementation of it is the Mississippi valley will become not only vicious, but tremendously expensive if the manner in which national appropriations shall be expended is to be dictated by localities which have no interest in seeing that they are wisely employed.

The Jadwin plan may not be perfect; but it is rather strange that Mr. Hoover, who presumably was as competent an engineer when he, at least inferentially, approved it sixteen months ago, as he is today, should now suggest its suspension and a resurvey of the whole control problem. The first thing the surveyor should do is to run a straight line between politics and flood protection —and then stick to it.

They wear the same disinterested look that distinguished them back in the days before the Noble Experiment came into being. Their hair is combed the way the barber would do it, if you let him. Their white duck coats are as stiff and immaculate as ever; while across from the stretch of real mahogany, Cyril the Free Lunch Entrepreneur dispenses luscious sandwiches of hot roast beef, with hard boiled eggs, radishes, olives, celery, pickled onions and pretzels for the fastidious.

Everything is as it used to be, except the price, the "needle" beer and the "cut" hooch.

THE WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

WOMEN EXPERTS

The ever-fascinating dispatches reveal the fact that an Ohio woman, Mrs. Ray O. Myers, has taken up embalming. One learns she won the national amateur typing championhsip. A champion at one thing, she proposes to be a champion at another. The expert typist is to become the expert embalmer. Just some more evidence of the melancholy fact that man, as an expert, is fading out of the picture. Man's field of supremacy is down to garden plot size.

FOR FREEDOM AND FAIRNESS

Fair minded folks will agree with Senator Vanderberg of Michigan, in his law to keep a judge from acting as "judge, legislature, prosecutor and snerIff" when he alleges that a newspaper man or anybody else has been in contempt of court. No federal judge—no other judge for that matter—should pass on a case of contempt which originated in his own court. He has been elected or appointed to be a judge, not to be a prosecutor.

SHORT SIGHTED

Strange that the many who frequently find fault with the outspokenness of newspapers, and their daily habit of telling the facts, do not think seriously enough to realize that the very newspapers which sometimes offend them are the high and final barriers that stand between the rank and file of the people and leaders who may and do become powerful enough to oppress them.

Just how comfortable would you feel about a lot of city officials, county officials, state and national officials if there were no means of quick, easy and free publicity? The newspaper is the outstanding necessity of a democracy—especially of a democracy which keeps moving toward a more highly centralized authority.

TITLES

Small men need titles to lean against. The weak need titles to hold them up. The strong need no titles. Personality does not need a title. The third assistant to the second vice president, with personality, may run the place.

DANGEROUS

Beware of the man who keeps smiling, who doesn't lose his temper over trifles, who remains calm in the daily battle. He is likely to be dangerous. He is likely to be a very patient man. He is likely to "get you if you don't watch out."

He was elected to congress in 1919 from the fourth Washington district and has been returned each term since. He is a Republican.)

During an inspection trip of 13 national forests in 10 of the western states and Alaska, just completed, a house sub-committee found that there is some difference of opinion of the future of the forests. Some timber company officials believe that by protecting the cut-over lands from the fire ravages, the seeds already deposited in the ground will reforest burned-over areas; others believe that it is more economical to replant, because they can restock the forest areas with high grade species of trees instead of by the hit-and-miss second growth of inferior quality. The sub-committee visited and studied replanted areas in several government reservations.

The big problem seems to oe the protection of the standing forests and young growth from forest fires. That means the need of a better system of firebreaks, the need of perfectly cleared areas a few yards wide, and the construction of trails for the firefighters. There is a need for funds for work along these lines.

There are still inaccessible areas in the valuable national forests, where it takes from two to four days for a firefighter to reach a forest fire after he discovers the smoke of it. The goal of the forest service of the department of agriculture is to get firefighters to the scene of a forest fire within two hours of its outbreak.

That goal will be reached. It means greater federal appropriations and expenditures for roads and trails and firebreaks in the great forests of the country. But it also means an enoromus economic saving in emergency firefighting which this past season alone has run into more than $2,000,000 over and above the regular, normal expenses of this forest fire combat service.

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

A poet once called the eyes that, and it is very true that they, more than any feature of the face, reveal a woman's real self. There is nothing more charming than a pair of clear feminine eyes, which look straight out into the world—happy and unafraid. Unfortunately, however, inner happiness is not the only factor responsible for the beauty of the eyes.

A summer in the glaring rays of the sun will mevitably leave a trail of tiny crowsfeet around them, and give to the pupils a strained, unnatural expression. When the skin has taken on the deep hue of sun tan, the eyes usually lose some of their appearance of brilliancy by contrast. There is, of course, special eye care which ca neliminate all these problems.

First, there is the eye bath, a delightful and refreshing routine which will remove even the tiniest particle of dust and leave the eyes clear and bright. Nourishing cream, patted around the eyes where the crowsfeet are wont to form, will keep the skin soft, smooth and free from lines. Before going out into the sun you would do well to pat some protective foundation cream around your eyes before applying your powder. This is the ounce of prevention that is worth a pound of cure.

Of course, the correct make-up touches can enhance the charm of the eyes unbelieveably. An important thing to remember is to brush away any particles of powder which may cling to your lashes and brows. Then apply a little eyelash and eyebrow grower. This not only thimulates growth, but gives the eyes a distinctive, well-groomed appearance.

Most of you will find that the correct make-up, discretely applied, will help the eyes compete wit hthe exotic coloring of the skin which you have brought back from your favorite resort.

Behind the Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — In any bad sense of the word, no lobbying whatever is done in Washington, according to the representatives of all the interests which keep legislative agencies of one sort or another on the job in the capital.

Every one of these outfits can give a perfectly satisfactory account of its activities—if not too embarrassingly questioned.

The personnel of Senator Caraway's lobby investigating committee is of a sort of threaten that the line of questioning WILL be embarrassing. Even a legislative agent whose conscience is pretty clear realizes that his work is liable to be presented in an unfavorable light

It is spoken of as the "Caraway committee" because the Arkansas senator introduced the resolution for the lobby probe and is chairman of the inquisitorial body. In a way, it might be called Senator Norris' committee; the Nebraskan appointed it. It is generally agreed that he appointed a corker.

It happened thus:

The Caraway resolution had been hanging fire for about a year—pooh-hooed by the senate element which considers any sort of an investigation a pest—when the Shearer inquiry broke unexpectedly and unavoidably, and gave the subject of lobbying such a fillip that the Arkansan managed to get action on his proposition before the hush-hush folk had time to stop him

In a final effort to smother the thing, the hush-hushers did contrive to get the resolution referred to a committee, and there, if they had picked the right one, it would have slumbered, but by a fatal error, probably due to their hurry, they sent it to the judiciary committee, of which the violently unmanageable Senator Norris is chairman.

Grabbing his fountain pen, Norris instantly jotted down, as a subcommittee to tear lobbying wide open, the names of:

Caraway?—a lobbyphobe of deepest dye, with notoriously the most vicious tongue in the United States senate.

Borah?—ag'in everything and everybody.

Walsh? — the oil prober!—'nuff said.

Blaine—Most merciless of Wisconsin radicals.

Robinson?—to be sure, there would be a little balm in Gilead in Robinson, if there were about four more of him. Robinson is regular enough. But what price one lone Daniel in the den of lions?

That much is considered by everyone.

But they do say there are plenty of new kinds.

For instance, there is a lot of talk of the "social lobby"—which, so it's gossipped, will take up a promising young member of one of the two houses of congress, and his ambitious frau and their debutante daughters, if they have any, and speedily make "somebodies" of them in the most exclusive circles, provided the office-holder of the family responds approximately to his name when the roll is called in his branch of the national legislature.

It also is often worth a politician's while to have his recommendations heeded when appointments are to be made in his home bailiwick.

For that matter, it is nice for him to feel that he probably can count on a snug appointive berth for himself, in case he meets with a reverse at the polls one of these days.

The mere consciousness of influence in high quarters — available whenever it may be required—is comfortable.

Or whose business is it if a fat job in private life is offered to an old political war horse?—when, in the fulness of time, he retires from the public service.

And do lobbyists (if there are any) deal in such commodities?

It is exactly to see if any answer can be found to that query that Senator Caraway was so anxious to have his investigatorial resolution adopted.

Still, if Senator Caraway's subcommittee succeeds in prying the lid off, who knows what they may find underneath it?

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

BREAKFAST

Grape Fruit or Orange Juice
Rolled Oats with Top Milk
Poached Eggs on Toast

LUNCHEON

Cream of Tomato Soup
Toasted Whole Wheat Bread Strips
Baked Apples with Cream
Home-Made Molasses Cookies
Milk

DINNER

Veal with Lima Beans
Creamed Cauliflower
Cabbage Salad
Stuffed Pears or Sliced Peaches with Rice Pudding

Cooked peaches or other fruit may be used in place of the fresh peaches with the rice pudding The menu would serve four.

Today's Recipes

Veal with Lima Beans—Buy one and one-half pounds of veal for roasting and have the butcher chop it into very small pieces, less than an inch in size. Melt two tablespoons butter in an iron skillet, add one-half cup of chopped onion and one stalk of celery. Fry until brown, taking care not to burn. Then add the veal and fry it till nice and brown. Put into mixture two cups of raw sliced tomatoes and stir till the tomatoes begin to get soft. Season to taste and barely cover with hot water. Then add three-fourths pound fresh lima beans. If your skillet is large enough to hold the entire mixture, it makes an ideal roaster. But if it is too small transfer the mixture to a roaster and cook in an oven 275 degrees for three hours. This is nice baked and served in a glass casserole.

Stuffed Pears—Pare and core large pears and stuff with seeded dates and shredded cocanut. Place together in a glass baking dish, cover bottom of pan with water and bake one hour with oven regulator at 275 degrees.

Sliced Peaches With Rice Pudding—Make regular pudding in baking dish. Serve in dessert dishes, warm and slice peaches over the rice, pouring top milk over all.

Suggestions

Small Egg Beater

A small 10 cent egg beater with bowl and cover, such as is sold for children, can be used for making thickening for gravies or custards, beating egg yolks, whipping small amounts of cream and various other household uses.

Waxed Ticking.

A young housekeeper writes: In remaking a pair of feather bed pillows I purchased a good heavy piece of feather-proof pillow ticking. An experienced housekeeper told me before making this up I should rub the wrong side wen with a piece of beeswax, which will keep the small feathers from coming through.

BUTTERSCOTCH TARTS—One cup brown sugar, one tablespoon butter, two tablespoons water, one cup milk, two tablespoons cornstarch, one egg, one-half teaspoon vanilla, four tablespoons confectioner's sugar. Heat sugar, butter and water together until sugar is dissolved. Mix milk, cornstarch and beaten egg yolk and add to sugar mixture; cook over hot water until thick, cool and add vanilla, pour into baked tart shells and cover with meringue made of beaten egg white and confectioner's sugar and brown in hot oven.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

Have a Physical Examination Before Using Mechanical Exercises

Miss J.—There have been reports in the medical literature recently of harmful effects caused by the indiscriminate use of the vibratory machines you ask about. One case was that of a man who had symptoms of intestional trouble which was exaggerated exceedingly; and another case of a man who had inflamation of the bladder so that a hemorrhage was caused. So it is wise to have a physical checkup to be sure there are no disturbances which will be made worse by the active vibration the machines give, before you use one. They are undoubtedly beneficial—if there is no reason you should not use them—especially if you are of sedentary habits and do not get time for enough vigorous exercise and walking in the open, for the vibrations give a good massage, with a general stimulation of the muscles and circulation. I feel that I get benefit from the one I have.

While these vibratory machines undoubtedly help to reduce the measurements by causing some of the superficial fat to break down, they will not reduce the weight. You have to limit your calories in order to reduce; in other words, you have to go on a scientific reducing diet. The paradox is explained by the fact that at the same time of the lessening of the fat tissue, there is also a development and increase in the muscle tissue. However, an equal weight of muscle tissue does not take up so much space as fat tissue. Of course, this development of the muscle tissue and the lessening of the fat are desirable.

We have a pamphlet on Reducing and Gaining and an article outlining some splendid trunk exercises called the Tummy Ten. You may have these by following the column rules.

Warts and Moles

Mrs. C.—I wouldn't advise any patent medication for the removal of moles, or any home treatment of them. I judge from the description of the advertised product you sent me, of "a syrupy substance of the color and consistency of honey," that it is probably collodion with 5 per cent or so of salicylic acid in it. This is one of the standard remedies for warts and corns. Simple collodion, as well as many other antiseptic substances, will also remove simple warts, if painted daily for some time. Perhaps the collodion has a double action in that it cuts off a little of the blood supply and makes the outer layer die and finally wears it down. But for moles or any but the simple warts, it is best to go to a dermatologist for treatment.

"Dear Doctor: I believe you are right in thinking that habitually unshaved faces are a cause of divorce. But a painted woman is sure as disgusting to a normal man as a be-wiskered man to a normal woman! It is enough to make a man want a divorce to have to go out with a woman whose face is all dirtied up with powder like a clown in a circus. Why can't a lovely lady wash her face and leave it clean? Even though her complexion is not famous, she looks a darn sight nicer with a clean face than with a lot of dirty paint smeared all over. She puts it on in a dark bedroom, thinking it improves her, but out in the light of day—mein Gott! what a clown a man's wife becomes! What can I do about it?

DISGUSTED HUSBAND."

To the one woman who is inartistic in taking the shine off her nose and adding a youthful bloom to her cheeks, D. H., I think there are 999 men who do not realize the importance of their daily shave. For your problem, I suggest you move, if possible, and get a light, airy bedroom (more hygienic, anyway), and also purchase your wife one of these magnifying, hand mirrors and ask her to inspect herself closely in the light before she sallies forth. you cannot blame women for wanting to look their best, and prettiest, for that's the way your sex likes 'em.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

What chance happiness when the girl you love lies to you before marriage?

Most of us lie more or less, of course. We say we are glad to see people when we are not. We lie in a host of other little ways, but a person who habitually deceives another, whose word one cannot rely on, is most uncomfortable to live with. Even when such a one tells the truth we are forced to doubt them. And this doubt will wreck the happiest partnership.

BLUE: In the first place, the girl is too young to consider marriage. She should wait at least two years, better four.

In the second place a girl who would deceive you now would not be very likely to make you happy. You would grow to doubt her even when she was telling the truth. It's unfortunate that you love her and that she knows that she can make you give in when she cries. That won't last forever. You'll soon grow tired of her tears, and they won't move you. You can't expect happiness on that basis. I think it would be much better if you broke with her now.

"Dear Virginia Lee: Could you please answer these questions: I am invited to a shower for a wedding. What do you think would be appropriate to take, and should I put on it who it is from? How should I congratulate her? My daughter has frequent sore throat. Do you know of any simple remedy that would cure it? MRS. F."

Linen towel, bath towel or set of towel and wash cloth, lunch cloth, lunch napkins, small pieces of china or glass, small pieces of silver or pewter, pottery, small lamps bath mat and rugs, etc. Have it wrapped as a gift at the store or wrap it yourself in tissue paper tied with ribbon and put a pretty card with your name on it and "best wishes," or "congratulations" on it.

Just tell the bride that you hope she will be very happy. If you know the groom, say something nice about him. Your daughter should go to a doctor. It may be her tonsils are infected and should be removed.

BUCKY: If I address a letter to you at your home with "Bucky" on the envelope, it would be sure to be opened by the wrong person, dear, so I think it better to answer you through the column.

I am very sorry for you in your trouble and think you are admirable when you try to excuse your mother's behavior on the ground of nervousness and old country ideas. They probably do account for many of her actions. Old-fashioned parents take the attitude that their children are their property and must do as they say, no matter how erratic their actions and words.

Try to control yourself, and to be as respectful as you can, although I certainly do not blame you for standing up for yourself when untrue stories are told about you.

Fighting and quarreling are degrading and should be avoided as much as possible, but I understand that is hard with a person who is so unreasonable.

Of course if you are actually abused you could take the matter to the children's court and they would talk to your mother and take you away from her if they thought it necessary. But I presume you would not want it to go that far.

You have only one more year of high school, and I want you to finish. Then, if you are not planning to go to college, you will doubtless get a job and be independent. If you cannot live happily at home, then leave and make your own way.

Judging from your letter, I would say you are an unusually bright and fair-minded girl, and your writing is good. Your English and grammar are also above the average, so I am sure you will overcome your handicap at home and grow into a sweet, broad-minded woman.

Peter's Adventures

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

THE CRADLE IN THE MULBERRY TREE

"Oh, dear!" said Peter to Sir Butterfly, "I certainly insulted Death's Head's Caterpillar without meaning to. I hope the fellow will not take a real dislike to me. He looks sort of dangerous and he must be at least four inches long and as thick as a man's finger. Will he bite, do you think?"

"No, indeed he won't," said Butterfly. "He is not really angry, only a little bit injured in his pride and he will soon forget all about it. Don't notice him at all."

"When I have grown nice and fat I shall know that it is high time to hide in the moist earth. I'll spin a cocoon that some say reminds them of a sea shell, and there I'll spend my pupa days. Then I, too, shall burst out as a gorgeous flier and upon myback I'll bear a skull that is the coat of arms of my particular branch of the family."

"Very good," declared General Hawk-Moth, "and now, after the Honorable Mrs. Bombyx has told how the eggs are laid, her 'beginning' will complete the story of spinning a cocoon. Only we must all fly over to the mulberry tree for that is where the silk worms always sleep the best."

Without more ado and in great excitement all the scalewings flew toward the mulberry tree. Even Sir Butterfly, in his evident anxiety to miss nothing, forgot all about Peter, who ran after them as quickly as he could. But the mulberry tree was quite a distance away, and when the boy reached it and edged his way through the crowd the Bombyx caterpillar had finished whatever he had to say and was spinning hundreds of yards of fine silk thread, wagging her head from side to side in great pain. The boy thought at first she must be. But as none of the moths paid the least bit of attention to it, Peter concluded that the motion she made was only part of the spinning, and he was quite right.

At last, having spun a great quantity of silk, the caterpillar wrapped itself tightly up in it, leaving her head until the last (its spinner was in its head), and it was from the spinner that oozed the sticky, yellow stuff that became soft silk.

"There," exclaimed General Hawk-Moth, when the head was at last covered, "friend Silkworm will sleep in her silken cradle until the day comes for her to wake up a moth like the Honorable Mrs. Bombyx!"

Merchants Close Stores For Game Friday

FRAMED by Phil

If information divulged by an ardent Ohio State University alumnus and attributed to Dr. John W. Wilce, former Ohio State football coach, represents the actual status of things, there is an explanation of why championship teams are seldom produced at State.

You have often heard the question asked, "Why does not State develop teams on a par with other Western Conference schools with such a large student body to draw from and the large number of candidates available every season?"

The answer is possibly contained in a story told by Dr. Wilce a few years ago during a visit to Xenia after he delivered a talk here.

Dr. Wilce disclosed that on the occasion of the annual meeting of the coaches of each of the Big Ten schools at Chicago five or more years ago, the ten coaches, representing Ohio State, Illinois, Michigan, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Indiana, Purdue, Northwestern and Chicago, held a secret meeting from which all outsiders were excluded.

One coach arose and expressed the wish that some method be arrived at whereby it could be determined the ranking of each of the conference schools with respect to the quality of the football material available for the coaches over a period of the last ten years.

In other words, the coaches desired to ascertain which of the schools had had the best material to work with in the development of football teams.

A vote was taken among the ten mentors and the result was surprising. The coaches voted unanimously that Iowa had been blessed with by far the most talented players with which to build up football teams. Illinois and Michigan tied for second place with Minnesota fourth.

Ohio State ranked seventh. Despite the fact the quality of its football material has been below that of six other Big Ten schools, no State eleven, if memory serves correctly, has ever finished that low in the conference standing and a number of championship or near-championship teams have been developed.

However, the coaches did not go a step further, it appears, and seek to find out why the material of one school should be better than that of another, which is to be regretted since this would be another phase of the question interesting to investigate.

In any event the story has its points and it is small wonder that the caliber of Ohio State elevens is not always up to the expectation of the "Downtown Coaches" of the school.

While on the subject, the resignation of Dr. Wilce as head football coach at Ohio State was a feature of the last Western Conference season which caused no little concern in the Big Ten. For a number of years Dr. Wilce has been recognized as one of the leading teachers of football in the country.

His teams had always been well schooled in all departments of play. Previous to his advent at Ohio State, the Buckeyes were not looked upon as a team of strength. After Dr. Wilce took the helm, championship teams were often developed and the huge stadium at Columbus became a reality.

Dr. Wilce did a great deal for Ohio State football and the game in the conference. With all due respect to his successor, Sam Willaman, his loss will be felt keenly at Columbus and the Big Ten lost a man who had always stood for the highest ideals in football.

Observers who have seen the 1929 Buckeyes in action this season are of the unanimous opinion that the Ohio State team has a great defense, but, according to one alumnus at least, the backfield is the weakest in the last ten years. The material is simply missing. True, Ohio State scored a surprising victory over the highly-touted Iowa eleven last Saturday, but State admittedly received most of the so-called breaks that were passed out, a factor that detracts somewhat from the win.

Gridders In Fighting Mood For Annual Battle Here

Fighting mad and showing new life in practice, Xenia Central High School's football squad is determined to make an improved showing Friday afternoon at Cox Field in the game with Withrow High School's crack Cincinnati eleven, which to all intents and purposes should prove the most attractive contest of the season.

Friday is to be observed as "Equipment Day," all of the proceeds of the game after deducting expenses, being used to purchase new equipment for Buccaneer athletic teams for next year.

Indications are that probably the largest crowd of the season will be on hand and the Bucs will not lack for vocal support from the sidelines.

The estimated huge attendance at the game is based on the fact that twenty-seven Xenia business firms have agreed to close their places of business from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. Friday, thereby giving employes an opportunity to witness the game.

Coach Wilson has got his squad into a fighting humor but Xenia's showing will depend to a large extent on the physical condition of a number of regulars.

Much of the responsibility will rest on Xenia's two letter men, Fullback Joe Smittle and Quarterback Birch Bell. Both have been hampered by injuries this season, but Smittle by his play so far this season, has given ample indication that he can rip up a line for plenty of yardage when he is right. He also backs up the line and does about anything you can ask for a back to do.

Bell passes well but his greatest assets are speed and shiftiness. His absence from the Buccaneer lineup for two weeks was due to a cracked collar bone, but he will be ready to go against the Tigers.

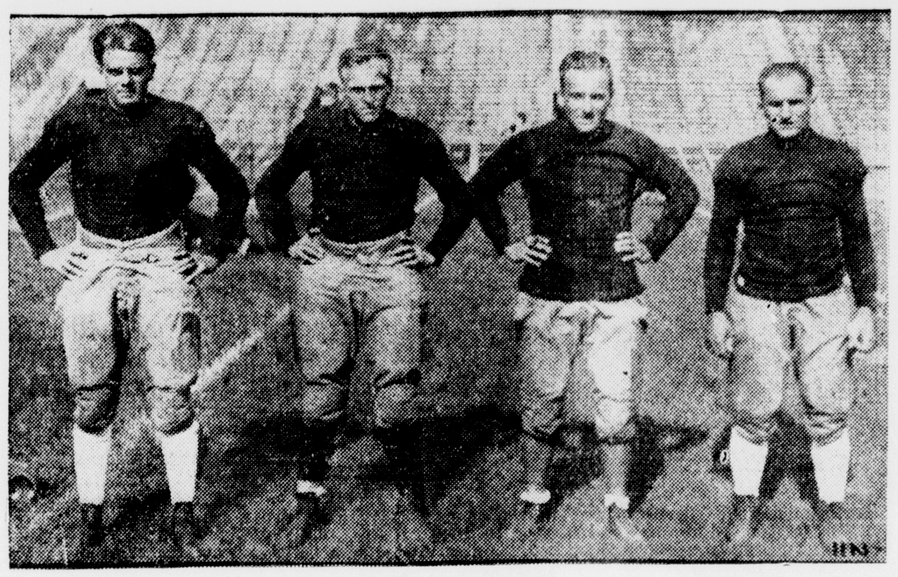

A list of Xenia merchants who have signed a petition agreeing to close their stores from 2:30 to 4:30 during Friday's game follows: The R. D. Adair Co., Hutchison and Gibney Co., The Hy-Art Shop, Direct Furniture Co., Miller Electric Galloway and Cherry, John North, H. E. Eichman, W. J. Kennedy, Dunkel's Grocery, M. O. Abramowitz, Coates' Barber Shop, L. A. Wagner, The Criterion, Melvin Johnson Barber Shop, Valet Press Shop, Xenia Auto Necessity Co., Lula Faye Dining Room, Styles Shoe Store, Burgin Bankrupt Store, Jobe Bros., C. A. Weaver Co., J. C. Penney Co., J. Thorb Charters, E. B. Curtis, L. S. Barnes and John A. Wood Barber Shop.

May Succeed Huggins

Reports are current that "Eddie" Collins, former star of the Philadelphia Athletics, will be selected to manage the New York Yankees, filling the vacancy caused by the death of Miller Huggins.

Poems that Live

NO FAULT IN WOMEN

No fault in women to refuse
The offer which they most would choose:
No fault in women to confess
How tedious they are in their dress:
No fault in women to lay on
The tincture of vermilion,
And there to give the cheek a dye
Of white, where Nature doth deny:
No fault in women to make show
Of largeness, when they've nothing so;
When, true it is, the outside swells
With inward buckram, little else:
No fault in women, though they be
But seldom from suspicion free:
No fault in womankind at all,
If they but slip, and never fall.

Will Transmit Driving Power by Radio

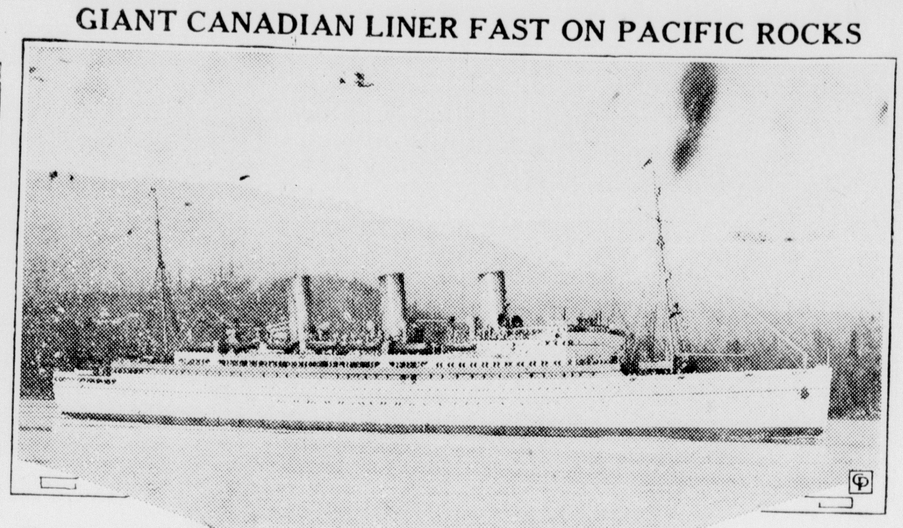

George Peabody Converse, husband of Anita Stewart, motion picture star, is perfecting a mechanism which by means of radio will transmit electric energy from the place of its generation to other spots hundreds of miles away. It will be possible, he declares, to operate airplanes, steamships, railroad trains and automobiles from distant points of control. And more, he declared, when perfection has been attained, the instrument will be able to gather electric energy from the atmosphere and harness to the vehicle to be motivated. His invention, he says, ultimately will do away with the internal combustion engine and the use of gasoline in automobiles.

Elopers in Plane Foil Parents

Good, Jr. (right), twenty-two-year-old aviation student, by means of an aeroplane. The youngsters flew away in Good's aeroplane from the home of the bride in Short Hills, N. J., and arrived in Belair, Md., where they were married. They are spending an aeroplane honeymoon in the South.

AS EHMKE'S MOTHER "LISTENS IN"

Mrs. Julia Ehmke, 73, mother of Howard Ehmke, veteran Athletics pitcher and hero of the opening world series game, has been following every detail of the baseball classic by means of the radio in her home at Silver Creek, N. Y. When her son established a new world's record with 13 strikeouts, Mrs. Ehmke remarked: "It is just what I have been praying for."

Two courageous French women and 17 hardy sailors, survivors of the auxiliary schooner Bretagne, which foundered off the Washington coast so quickly that her radio operator could not send out S. O. S. calls, are pictured here after their return to safety. After tossing in a lifeboat for 21 hours, in mountainous seas, they drifted across the path of the lumber schooner, Whitney Olson, which took them to Los Angeles. Capt. Royal Pair Take to the Air

Her Majesty, Queen Marie of Roumania, with her daughter, Princess Ileana, about to take a flight over the Baltic Sea in a hydroplane. Princess Ileana has admitted her liking for a young German Prince, of Hohenlohe, to whom she has been reported engaged. The Queen's aspiration to establish a Balkan matriarchate also suffered a distressing setback when a joint session of Parliament appointed Judge Constantin Saracenau to the Regency left vacant by the death of Garfore V. Buzdugan.

PLAN LARGEST OBSERVATORY FOR CALIFORNIA PEAK

Within a few months, what is said to be the greatest astronomical observatory in the world will be constructed on a southern California mountain, within a 200-mile radius of Pasadena. More than $20,000,000 will be expended to complete and equip the observatory by the Carnegie Institute. Nightly, Major P. H. McLaughlin, in charge, makes observations of the solar system to determine how many nights in the year are clear enough to study the heavens. Construction of a 200-inch reflector is under way. San Bernardino, Big Bear and Baldy Peaks and Mt. Volcan have been scenes of trial observations and the observatory probably will be constructed at one of these places. Above, Major McLaughlin is looking through the telescope he is using to make his observations.

DAMAGE SUITS ARE DISMISSED AFTER SETTLEMENT MADE

A compromise for an unannounced consideration having been effected, three suits demanding damages aggregating $6,520.25, which have been pending against Police Chief Ben South, Wilmington, since December 22, 1928, have been ordered dismissed in Common Pleas Court.

The actions recall an auto collision on the Dayton Pike, November 21, 1928, Mary O. Watson, Xenia, colored, plaintiff in a suit for $5,088.75 damages, alleged personal injuries sustained in the accident while riding in a car with her son, H. O. Watson, who filed a separate personal injury suit for $1,011.50. The third suit for $500 was filed by Mrs. Watson, as administratrix of the estate of W. E. Watson, deceased, on the grounds the car which was wrecked belonged to the estate.

The World And All

BY CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

NO ACCOUNTING FOR TASTES

A business of gigantic proportions has been built up by the unknown publishers who cater to the demand for erotica, which is said to exist in every part of the United States.

One of the most assiduous collectors of erotica, as the suppressed books on unmentionable subjects are called, is an oil millionaire of a small town in Oklahoma. This man has a vault in his home for the preservation of the expensive "treasurers" that he has collected from the corners of the earth. He has thousands of volumes on his shelves, not one of which could be legally sent through the mails or legally imported into this country.

What a party John S. Summer would have in that Oklahoma library!

There is a handsome profit in that have high rents to pay depend upon under-the-counter trade for their profits.

Some of the bookleggers go abroad for their supplies. Many forbidden books are printed in France in the English language, by expatriated Americans, for the American trade. These books are smuggled in, as they would be confiscated by the customs in the ordinary course of inspection.

There are also printers who specialize in this trade. These are regular journeymen printers who have saved their money, bought equipment for a small shop, and gone into money-making. They set their own type and do their own presswork in one-man shops, or in some instances in two-man shops.

Type is set for a forbidden book, a thousand copies are printed and bound, and then the shop is closed up while the proprietor or proprietors go out with their brief cases, peddling their wares on a round of well-known points of distribution. A thousand of these books, cheaply printed, will bring the printers five thousand dollars, and will be sold to collectors of such stuff for twenty-five thousand dollars or more.

Restricts Liberty Professor Finds

RUSSIA as a land of striking contrasts, where at the same time the traveler finds remarkable systems of transportation, production, and education side by side with the strictest limitations on personal liberty, was portrayed by Professor Rudolph Broda, associate professor of social sciences at Antioch, in an interview at the college.

Just returned from an all summer's trip through the land of the Soviet, Professor Broda gained some intimate pictures of Russian conditions.

"I was greatly pleased to verify some of the rumors I had heard about improved industrial and business condition under the Soviet," he said. "But much chagrined to find also true some of the darker reports about conditions in the field of personal and political liberty, and the relations existing between the various classes."

On the "bright" side, Professor Broda noted what he said was conclusive evidence that production, both industrial and agricultural, has increased in Russia under the Soviet regime to a point far beyond anything experienced before the war. He also credited the Russians with having developed an efficient system of communications equalling or excelling anything in western Europe, a remarkable state program for the improvement of public health, and an improved educational system which based admission to the secondary schools and colleges on the results of competitive examinations.

But liberty in the sense of the freedom of speech, and the press, Professor Broda found to be dead. In the church, the professor declared, the clergy have the right to conduct services as they please, but they cannot include any sort of religious discussion.

Freedom of discussion, he said, is to be found only within the ranks of the Communist party, in the council meetings. There discussion and expression of opinion is permitted,—but once the Communist party has voted on a course of action, discussion is at an end and unswerving obedience is all that is accepted.

This oppression of civil liberties Professor Broda declared to be based on the desire of the scarcely more than 1,000,000 members of the Communist party to control Russian political affairs. For those outside the party there is no political liberty.

Professor Broda pointed out that he had convinced himself that the idea of "equality" is not a reality in Soviet Russia. There are distinctions between individuals based on their skill and ability. Thus the captain and mates of the vessel which took Professor Broda and his party to Russia from London received different rates of pay. One notable feature however was that they all, irrespective of rank, received some share in the profits of the voyage. During the trip they held a number of meetings for the discussion of events of interest in Russia, and at one meeting Professor Broda reported hearing members of the crew speak at length on the subject of electrification of the region around Leningrad. All workers, he said, especially the 9,000,000 members of the trades unions and the members of the Communist party, are intensely interested in the development and success of the Soviet program.

Although the management of 95 per cent of all industry and trade is in the hands of the state, and is conducted through "trusts" in which the state, various departments, and municipalities own all the interests, individual skill is repaid on the basis of managerial ability. Many of the industrial and business heads are not Communists, and they are paid on a profit sharing basis. Only those who belong to the Communist party, and who have sworn allegiance to the social principles of the party, are restricted in their earnings. Thus although the country is in the hands of the Communist party, a vast part of its industrial organization still recognizes the economic motive largely in its methods.

Professor Broda also indicated that there is still much class warfare between the wealthy peasant and the poor peasants. Although all the land is held by the state and is let out to the peasants, some of them by the possession of cattle and farming implements are much wealthier than the others. The Soviet government by organization of co-operative societies is striving to overcome this situation but has met with little success.

WARWICK TRIAL IS STARTED THURSDAY

Jury trial of Oliver Warwick, colored, Columbus Pike, on a charge of receiving stolen property, began in Common Pleas Court Thursday morning.

Warwick is accused of receiving eighty-three chickens, identified by authorities as having been stolen from the farm of Maywood Turner, Wilberforce Pike, September 11. The chickens were recovered as they were allegedly being delivered to Warwick's home. Warwick denied the charge but was indicted by the October grand jury.

Attorney F. L. Johnson is defense counsel.

Informed motorists say, "Buy an EIGHT"

The informed demand today is unmistakably for the Eight. The swing of public preference is developing with unprecedented rapidity. Nobody can predict what chance a Six will have in next year's used car markets.

Consider the facts: During the first seven months of this year, in 43 states,* registrations of new cars over $1,000 showed a 94 per cent increase in Eights—and an 18 per cent decrease in Sixes. Every high-priced American car is an Eight. The finest models of such foreign aristocrats as Bugatti, Bianchi, DeDion-Bouton, Isotta-Fraschini, Mercedes-Benz and Renault are Eights. Today, over 41 per cent of all American makes of cars are Eights.

So why pay as much or more for a Six when you can have a champion Eight by Studebaker—holder of 11 world records and more American stock car records for speed and endurance than all other makes combined? A Studebaker Eight, brilliant with the power, the smoothness, the flexibility that only an Eight can deliver. An Eight as economical as the thriftiest Six. And styled with a notable smartness all the way through.

Remember what happened to the Fours in the medium and high priced fields. Sixes today are succumbing to Eights the same way. Now that it costs no more to own and drive one—get an Eight—a champion Studebaker Eight!

MUST PROTECT HENS FROM COLD WEATHER UNIVERSITY SAYS

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 17.— If hens lay during cold weather, they must be protected from extremely low temperatures. Therefore the plans for the standard Ohio Type poultry house which had been drawn and recommended by the Ohio State University, here through the past several years, have been modified to provide more warmth.

Specifications for the new Ohio Type house take into particular consideration the temperature conditions in the house.

The height of the house has been reduced considerably because the former standard unit was so high that it was cold now the heighth is just sufficient to enable a person to stand upright at the lowest point.

The specifications for the new type house call for double walls. The double walls are obtained by lining the inside of the boards with insulation material or by lining with boards and stuffing with shaving. The new type house makes it possible to maintain a temperature above freezing even in the coldest weather in Ohio. Poultrymen using insulated houses find that cold spells have little effect on their egg production.

Use of heat in insulated houses during extremely cold weather will materially aid in egg production because the hens, when the temperature is comfortably high will consume a normal amount of feed. heating plants for Ohio poultry

Some of the most successful houses have been home made. The outstanding success in poultry house heating has been obtained by placing hot water pipes in the floor of the house, thereby heating the floor, and thus maintaining the dry litter as well as warming the house.

Complete instructions for the new Ohio Type house are contained in a recent bulletin on poultry houses written by H. P. Twitchell, specialist in agriculture engineering and R. E. Craig, poultry husbandry specialist for the university.

THREE PRISONERS TAKEN TO PRISON

In the custody of Deputy Sheriff George Sugden and Ernest Mangan, night turnkey at the County Jail, three prisoners under sentence to the Ohio State Reformatory at Mansfield were removed to that institution Thursday.

The were: Ralph Terrell, 19, and Ralph Coates, 18, who must serve from one to two years because they broke into box cars on the Pennsylvania Railroad yards last July 17, stealing half a bushel of peaches and two watermelons, and David Doss alias David Pierce, who was sentenced to a term of from one to twenty years for attack.

FRANK ZARTMAN IS CALLED SUDDENLY AT NORWOOD HOME

Frank Zartman, former Xenian, assistant editor of The Billboard, Cincinnati theatrical weekly, died Wednesday morning at his home, 2121 Cathedral Ave., Norwood, the result of a sudden illness.

Mr. Zartman recently returned from a two weeks' vacation and had complained that he was not feeling well. He was born in Jamestown but later lived in Xenia for some time and was connected with the Dayton and Xenia Railway Co., before he entered newspaper work in Dayton.

He served as a reporter on both the News and Herald in Dayton, and was later assistant city editor of the News. Leaving newspaper work, he became manager of the Strand Theater, downtown movie house and was also manager of Forest Park, Dayton amusement park, when it first opened. He traveled for several years as press agent for the Sells-Floto Circus and was widely known, especially in the newspaper fraternity.

Mr. Zartman went to Cincinnati to assume a connection with the Billboard two years ago and was assistant editor of that publication at the time of his death. He was active in Masonic circles, being a member of Horace Irvin Lodge, F. and A. M., Dayton, of the Scottish Rite and of Antioch Temple Shrine in Dayton.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Kathryn Zartman, one daughter, Mrs. Wilfred Luther, Cincinnati and a brother, Fred Zartman, of the Franklin Board and Paper Co., Franklin, O. Funeral services will be held at the home, 2121 Cathedral Ave., Norwood, at 1:30 p. m. Friday and burial will take place in Woodland Cemetery, this city, at 4 o'clock.

PROF. GIBBS WILL LECTURE ON BARRIE BEFORE BOOK CLUB

Prof. Lincoln Gibbs of Antioch College, Yellow Springs, will talk on "Sir James Barrie," at the first meeting of the year of the "Friends of Books Club," an organization sponsored by the Greene County Library for the benefit of those interested in the best books, old and new, Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, at the Library.

Prof. Gibbs, it is said, is a great admirer of Barrie and a splendid address is in view. He gave an interesting address at one of the meetings last year on "Eugene O'Neill."

The program committee expects to present an unusually attractive program for this year, although no definite announcements for the future meetings can be given. It may be of interest to many interested in these meetings, that the committee expects to devote one meeting to recent Scandinavian literature, one to modern humor and to bring a speaker from Dayton to discuss the new biographies.

The drama was chosen for the first meeting because of the interest Xenians are showing in the Little Theater Guild. With so much interest in the drama being shown a discussion of the plays of one of the most popular of modern dramatists will have a universal appeal.

The meetings are open to the public and all are invited to attend.

SCOUT MEETING

Troop No. 41, Boy Scouts of America, will have an inspection at its meeting Thursday evening, October 24 at 7:30 o'clock at the Scout cabin. All committeemen and registered Scouts of this troop are requested to be present as each troop in the district will be graded on attendance. The inspection will be followed by the serving of refreshments, according to Scoutmaster R. H. Kingsbury.

HIS OWN ROMANCY FOR COMING STORY

WOOSTER, O., Oct. 17.—Having selected the rural part of Wayne County as one section of the state little explored by literary men, Dr. S. F. Wood, the author of several novels, surprised himself by bringing one part of a romance with him when he came here to seek material for his facile pen.

The story will be included in a book which he plans to write soon, he said during an interview at his farm home, Cresthaven, six miles west of here.

Unostentatiously, a number of months ago, Dr. Wood purchased the farm of a Mrs. Lawrence in Chester Twp., the rambling old farmhouse and the wooded hills which appealed to his artistic taste.

Soon afterwards, he invited a friend, E. W. Vickers, a botanist of Mill Creek Park, Youngstown, to go on a week-end camping trip. The botanist's son, Prof. Lindley Vickers, made the third member of the party.

Dr. Wood selected a site in the forested area of the farm for their camp. He neglected to tell his guests that he owned the farm. The following day, he told his guests they had been invited to the farmhouse for the evening.

There they enjoyed a good old-fashioned evening at a typical country home. It was featured by home-made tasties and plenty of music, which was provided by Mrs. Lawrence's two daughters, Dorothy and Anna.

Vickers and his son returned to Youngstown. Dr. Woods remained on the farm and has been putting in many busy months transforming it to suit his fancy.

Among his projects, he has planned an orchard, which, in conjunction with the national forest area, creates an "airplane" tree. The orchard looks like a huge airplane when viewed from the air. Several years of growth on the part of the fruit trees will be required to complete the spectacle.

But to return to the story of the romance! It was just three weeks after the camping trip that Miss Dorothy Lawrence received a note from young Vickers asking permission to call. Three months later, she was wearing a diamond engagement ring.

And in the doorway of the old-fashioned farmhouse recently where her mother and grandmother were wedded, Miss Dorothy became Mrs. Lindley Vickers. Prof. and Mrs. Vickers have taken up their residence on a suburban farm at Belle Center, Ohio.

The story of the romance, together with its background will be woven into a story which Dr. Woods plans to write soon.

Among Dr. Woods' books are "Blossoms from the Clay," and "Creston Meadows." Another novel, "The Blue and Gold," a yarn centering around life at Granville, Ohio, will appear soon.

The chief feminine character, he said, is a personal friend and Dr. Woods vouches, "she is a real million dollar prize for the man who can persuade her to marry."

NEW CURRENCY IS NOW BEING FORGED

WHEELING, W. Va., Oct. 17.—Small sized currency is no deterrent to forgers, Wheeling residents have discovered that some of the midget $5 papers they have received are just that—papers.

The discovery has led to the arrival of squads of investigators from the federal justice and treasury departments. It is believed that the spurious bills were circulated shortly after the new currency was issued in July.

"KONJOLA FREED ME FROM ALL MY HEALTH TROUBLES"

Stomach and Kidney Troubles, and Nervousness Too, Quickly Routed By Famous Remedy.

"One of the main causes of my suffering was the poor condition of my stomach," said Mrs. Hattie Mixer, R. F. D. No. 2, Ashtabula, Ohio. "Food did not agree with me, and gas formed on my stomach after every meal. I was subject to headaches and dizzy spells and was very restless. Then, too, I suffered from the poor condition of my kidneys.

"A friend recommended Konjola to me and I gave it a trial. How glad I am that I did! My stomach and kidney troubles have disappeared—vanished as if by magic. My nerves are as calm and strong as they ever were. I eat and sleep well, and wake up in the morning feeling rested and refreshed. Konjola surely worked wonders in my case and I never lose an opportunity to praise it".

Konjola is sold in Xenia at the Gallaher Drug Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

INSECT IMMIGRANTS PROVE WORST ENEMIES

Insects introduced into the United States from foreign lands, according to J. S. Houser of the Department of Entomology of the Ohio Experiment Station, constitute our most serious insect offenders. Some of these have been established so long that we sometimes forget that they have not been present always. There are well over a hundred such pests in the United States and many of them are found in Ohio.

The Hessian fly, codling moth, San Jose scale, cabbage aphid, and rosy apple aphid, Mr. Houser says, will serve as examples of the older introductions, while the European corn borer, Oriental fruit moth, and Mexican bean beetle are prominent among the new comers.

Within recent years special efforts have been made to prevent the introduction of these foreign invaders, by plant importation regulations and inspection, but even under the most rigid precautions occasionally even now a new pest gains a foothold.

After an insect has been present for a long time there naturally develop a host of parasitic and predaceous enemies which operate against it and have a tendency to hold it in check. Mr. Houser cites the Colorado potato beetle as an example. Only occasionally does Nature strives to maintain a balance. When an insect is introduced into virgin territory it generally follows that its native controls are left behind, thus allowing it free opportunity to increase unchecked. Thus in its new home it may be many times more destructive than in its old.

The Oriental fruit moth is a notable exception of the newer introductions. Some of the imported native parasites were introduced into America with the pest itself and these are already making their presence felt.

The Federal Government is seeking out native controls for some of the other introduced pests, in the lands of their origin. These enemies or controls are being colonized in America. Substantial progress has been made in some instances, but at best the process is one which will require years to accomplish.

VEAL CALVES RETURN PROFIT OVER FEED COST

Veal calves returned $11.86 per head over the cost of their feed, as calculated by John F. Dowler, assistant in the department of rural economics of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, from records kept on twenty-three Putnam County, Ohio farms. This return was the compensation the farmer received to cover the cost of calf when dropped, his labor in feeding the calf, and any other expense.

The records were kept on 122 calves in the three years, 1926 to 1928, inclusive. The calves were kept an average of fifty days and consumed 130 gallons of whole milk and ten gallons of skimmilk during that period.

Most of the calves took the milk directly from the cow, only about one-fifth were bucket fed. One farmer fed a small quantity of meal in addition to whole milk.

The feed cost ranged from $10.74 to $19.83 per head and averaged twelve cents a gallon when fed from a bucket.

The weights at which the veals were sold varied from 130 to 250 pounds. The average weight was 185 pounds. The medium weight calves gave the largest margin above the cost of feed. The time spent in feeding and caring for the calves averaged ten minutes a day, or a little more than eight hours per head for the time the calves were on the farm.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

PLAYER WHEN NOT BUSY AT FOOTBALL

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 17.—Allen Holman, flashy young quarterback of Ohio State's gridiron squad, also plays polo, and girls, he does look swanky in the white polo togs.

On the polo field, Al displays himself to a great advantage. It's different in football, muchly so! In the latter sport, Al soon becomes besmeared with mud and dirt, and, anyhow, a football suit with its bulging pads and cumbersome headgear, doesn't make any man appear any too graceful. But in a polo outfit, with its smart breeches, wide belt and shiny boots, Al looks his best.

Holman's football ability—and he has plenty—has been so acclaimed that his prowress at polo has been almost totally eclipsed. The Iowa boy is just about the best polo player who ever matriculated at the Buckeye campus. He rides like a young Arab and he swings a wicked mallet. He's on the varsity squad and he is as much a threat on the turf as he is when handling the pigskin.

"Hockey on horseback," which is the way a humorist sometimes speaks of polo, was only recently declared a collegiate sport. There are three regulation fields south of the huge Ohio Stadium for practice and varsity competition. A stable of ninety ponies is at the disposal of the players.

Take it from Al, polo is a fast game. Perhaps it was astride the pony that the quarterback learned the dash and speed which promises to make him famous in the collegiate world as a football star.

Al is about five feet, ten inches tall and he tips the scales at 177 pounds, even after a stiff scrimmage. He's seen twenty-three summers.

According to other prominent campus figures at the university, Al is generally well liked. "He's nice," the co-eds say, and the men students vouch that "Al's Okay."

The Iowan has been meeting a lot of tough luck, lately. He was threatened for a time by the eligibility committee of the Big Ten, but after two hearings, the eligibility czars ruled that he could play.

And so Al donned his football togs and reported for practice. But, bad luck still dogged his heels. In a practice session, Holman suffered an ankle injury and it has kept him on the sidelines off and on.

Mrs. Mary Stewart (left) and her nineteen-year-old daughter, Bessie (right), asserted members of the "Great Eleven" religious cult now under investigation in Los Angeles, who were questioned by police regarding what they know about the activities of the cult. Mrs. Stewart, who is treasurer of the Order, declined to make any statement as to the cult's finances. She said that her title in the order was "Eleazar, who stands between the dead and the living." It was the first time that her daughter, Bessie, nineteen, whose title is "The Still Waters," had been called to tell what she knew of the cult's activities.

SHOULD START BULB PLANTS IN AUTUMN

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 17.—Bulb plants for next spring should be started now, according to the recommendation of Professor Alex Laurie of the floriculture department of the Ohio State University here.

In all cases it is better to start the bulbs in soil than start them in water, as it is sometimes done, Prof. Laurie asserts.

He suggests that the bulbs be placed in shallow flowerpots filled with a medium garden loam soil. The bulbs should be planted deeply in the soil and the dirt pressed loosely about them.

"A temperature of 40 to 50 degrees Farenheit is desirable", says Professor Laurie.

In spite of the quarantine on Dutch bulbs which has raised the price on bulbs generally, Professor Laurie still maintains that the price is small considering the pleasure derived from planting and raising them.

The first essential is to obtain good bulbs and these are not obtainable in the cheaper stores.

BOARD WILL MEET

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 17.—Ohio Board of Real Estate Examiners will meet in Cleveland October 22 and 23, in the offices of the Cleveland Real Estate Board, Union Trust Building, for consideration of complaints filed with the board from that section of the state. A similar meeting will be held in Youngstown October 24.

IMPORTANT FEATURE OF FASHION

The very first thing we noticed as we went fall fashion scouting the other day was the importance of the new silhouettes for fall. Relegated to fashions of a bygone day is the straight, box-like silhouette that the feminine world welcomed with open arms not very many seasons ago and now seems just as eager to give it up and toss it aside with the same easy nonchalance she does anything she has grown tired of.

The new fall collections are without any question of a doubt designed for the sophisticated woman. There is nothing especially youthful about them. Rather they are mature. And yet, they have about them a certain something that appealed to us and we are sure, will to you too. And that is a feeling of being cut on the lines of the human figure. They are molded as to waistline and then spread out to give greater flare in the skirt.

We enjoyed our trip through the stores and shops very much and are sure you will too. For there is a decidedly new trend in the fashions for Fall, 1929, that is very pleasing. There are the most complicated themes you could imagine and yet they are worked into the body of the costume in such a manner that they are delightfully informal and free.

Concerning Fall Coats

If you are in the market for a new coat this winter you will have all sorts of fun making your selection. For the coat departments in the city are fairly bulging with grand merchandise that is decidedly new, decidedly Parisian, and in our opinion for the materials and furs and the beautiful workmanship are not high priced.

Feminine Flares Appear

We are sure that you will like these fluttery feminine flares, if for no other reason than that they are so smartly new and so flattering to the feminine figure. We saw one adorable coat of a black material that was very soft to the touch and fashioned along the peplum idea and with a long subtly flared section dropped to the back to within 6 or 7 inches of the hemline. The coat was perfectly straight beneath. It seemed to us a perfect coat for afternoon functions and semi-formal evening affairs.

Straight Line Broken

When the coats are straight lined, fashion has devised various ways and means of making this type of coat especially interesting by breaking up the straight line. In some cases by shoulder or yoke treatments that give a loose feeling about the shoulder, and in others in tiered effects. Belts are placed at a high waistline too, in some of the more youthful coats and often finish at the left side with a ring buckle of silver or some composition in color to match the coat.

The uneven hemline so long a dark horse in the daytime coat fashions, has come to the fore in no uncertain manner. We saw so many coats with this uneven hemline treatments.

In some cases the coat would be straight all around except for a different left side and in other cases the coat would dip gradually to the center back. One of the very smartest coats we saw had a scalloped hemline and even in this coat we noticed it had a downward trend movement toward the back hemline.

There isn't a woman living that doesn't love fur in great quantities on her winter coat. For that reason we are sure you will enjoy slipping into the lovely models that are shown in the shops and stores throughout the town. Fur is one thing that the designers and manufacturers have not spared. It is used in tremendous quantity on straight lined coats in lovely shawl collars and bell cuffs and is often used as a finishing touch either all around the bottom of the coat or in certain important spots.

Most Favored Trimmings

For instance one of the most favored trimmings in a straight coat is an enormous collar of Hudson seal or caracul, which when dropped on the shoulders becomes a long fur cape collar. This coat will no doubt be gratefully accepted in debutante and college girl circles.

Of the collar treatments, two types are particularly important. One is the collar of fabric with fur border which may be dropped flat placing the fur as a band about the shoulders. The other is cut high about the face with square collars and is usually fashioned of both flat and long haired furs. One interesting collar we chose was in Elizabethan shape with eggshell skunk on the inside and dark skunk on the outside.

Clever Sleeves

You will adore the sleeves on the new coats. Mostly because of the way in which fur is used on them. We saw flaring and close fitting cuffs, pouched styles and plain bands set just below the elbow. One coat had fur that reached from the wrist to the elbow. In the formal coat range Lida cloth is the outstanding fabric for fall with plenty of broadcloth and lots of novelty wool shown, especially a loosely woven basket fabric seems to have become a classic among fashionable women. Black, as usual, is the leading coat color, brown running a close second—beige and green next in line.

New Sport Coats

We had an awful time tearing ourselves away from the sport coat section because there is something so gloriously practical about them that in our estimation every woman feels much the same as we did. The most important feature about the new sport coats is the flaring movement. These flares do not appear in a bold and brazen manner but rather by deftly handled material evidently cut on the bias. Tweed, the old standby, still remains a favorite in the sports coat realm and is combined with all sorts of furs shown in various colors. The sales people in the shops place the importance on beige and brown, although they are of the opinion that green, red and blue will also be much favored by smart women.

Throughout the entire dress collections on exhibit in the shops, we noted a decided tendency toward the fitted silhouette. Skirts

Before we go any further, we want to tell you that fashion has worked hand in hand with the colorings of Autumn and places them of first importance in the fall dress collections. There is the capucine orange, rust leaf browns, and warm reds, as well as an overwhelming supply of the ever popular and ever fashionable black.

Higher Waistline

Women with a slender waistline are very much in luck this season for there is a very definite trend toward the higher waistline which is often achieved in the new frocks by placing the belt in a normal position. Occasionally, belts are used only in sections across the front or the back of the frock. We tried on several frocks just so that we could get a better idea to give to you and so many of them noticed the higher necklines.

Models are arriving daily—they are last minute styles from Paris showing slender and much more shallow V necks than we have seen for many seasons. Even in the case of square and round necks we notice that fashion does not intend to leave much of the neck revealed this fall.

We did not, however, thank heavens, see any high collars like our grandmothers used to wear, but we did see neat buttoned up effects that reached just to the base of the neck. It is interesting to note too in dresses of this type that fashionable women are omitting jewelry and pearl chokers, that is, if they have necks they are not ashamed of.

News of Sleeves

The sleeves we saw for the most part were closely fitted to the wrist and were often finished with lace or georgette and were embroidered in nail-heads of silver and gold. Nailheads seem to be very popular trimming for dark silk dresses and bows and buttons are very much used also. A sin the coats the skirts of the dresses show no end to the irregular hemline and it is our guess that women all over the land are going to find a fresh relief in the slightly lengthened skirt line. We don't know what brought this new length in dresses about but Paris has been pounding away for a long time trying to make American women believe the longer skirt is the more becoming skirt and at last we seem to be agreeing.

Slender Evening Silhouette

You will simply adore the new evening frocks. Fashion is doing are showing for fall.

In general, the silhouette for fall evenings is a slender one with a sharply dipping back. We noticed many tube-like short frocks in the evening collection have extremely long panels attached by cartridge pleating at a point below the hips and back end panels are likewise set on the side of the skirt.

Some very smart details of evening frocks are large, self-fabric bows, flared tiers and flounces frequently adopted in a winding treatment, thus giving the much desired length. After an absence of many seasons panels seem to be welcomed back into the evening mode and are used mostly to give length and color contrast.

VILLAGE NAMED FOR PROHIBITION ISSUE

BELLAIRE, O., Oct. 17.—The only known village in the county that has been named for the prohibition cause is Temperanceville, a hamlet on the western border of Somerset township.

Although prohibition did not become a law until 1918, this village, laid out in 1835, received its name because its founder Robert Gallagher, so abhorred use of intoxicating liquor that he thought he would make use of this principle in naming the new town to suit his belief.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

CREOMULSION

You, too, may have a clear skin

Skin troubles—pimples, boils, eczema, and sallow complexion—are usually but symptoms of a deeper, a more dangerous trouble—a lack of the normal count of red-cells in the blood.

THOUSANDS of people have weak, impure blood—to this may be attributed pimples, boils, eczema, "run-down" systems, rheumatism and even more serious ailments.

Without plenty of rich, red blood, there could be no strong, sturdy, powerful men, or beautiful, healthy women.

When you get the number of your red-blood-cells back to normal, that sluggish, let-down feeling, loss of appetite, those pains usually called rheumatism, boils, pimples and skin troubles disappear. You get hungry again and sleep soundly; firm flesh takes the place of that which was once flabby. You feel strong. Your nerves become steady. You are resistant to disease.

Throughout more than a hundred years S.S.S. has been a blessing to millions of people who have taken advantage of its wonderful medicinal properties. It is Nature's own blood tonic for improving the appetite, clearing the body of so-called skin troubles, and building strength and resistance to disease.

S.S.S.

S.S.S. is made from fresh vegetable drugs and has a successful record of over 100 years back of it.

S.S.S. increases the count of red-cells in the blood. Weak, impure blood is injurious to the system, lowering resistance to disease. Rich, red blood builds and sustains the body. S.S.S. helps Nature build rich, red blood. Good blood improves the processes by which the body is nourished, promotes constructive metabolism (healthy body building) and works against infection and disease. Take S.S.S. daily at mealtime. To get full benefit you must take it regularly and over a sufficient period of time. At all Drug Stores. Ask for the larger size. It is more economical.

MOST FASCINATING BUYERS WILL FIND

It's a little difficult to tell you the story of the fabrics for fall because they are one of those things that must be seen and felt to be appreciated. To our way of thinking, there is no more fascinating place in any store than the fabric sections with bolt after bolt of fresh new merchandise displayed in such a fashion that no one could possibly resist buying material for one's attire wardrobe—even if you can't sew a stitch!

A Word About Silks

To begin with, we must tell you about the lovely silks for fall. Canton crepes, crepe satins and soft crepe failles are extremely important both in plain and printed patterns. They make such stunning frocks for practically every daytime occasion and evening as well. The plain colors that are especially high fashion for the new season are the lovely colors of autumn—rust browns, dull greens, in red and of course, there is no questioning the importance of black.

Printed Silks

In the printed silks, the Spanish influence fostered by the recent international exposition at Barcelona, is very much in evidence. One of the foremost silk manufacturers of the country has given us a brilliant collection of silks in designs of Spanish inspiration and called them "Barcelona Prints." They appear on crepe and are especially attractive for fall and winter wardrobes.

Wool Effects

The important patterns in crepe de chines and flat crepes simulate wool effects, including many de signs that look for all the world like tweed until you feel them. Then there are others in plaids, checks, diagonal effects, stripes and effective border treatments. The effect of woolen patterns is achieved by skillfully combining the colors. It is our humble opinion that these tweed patterned silks will make very successful frocks and ensembles for school and college wear as they are more comfortable for class-room wear and yet have that practical look about them so beloved by the future debutante. We think they would be particularly smart if they were fashioned exactly after the lines of some of the new tailored woolen frocks.

Fall Coatings

If you are one of those fortunate people who can attempt to make a coat—or who have a dressmaker you can trust implicitly, the new fall coatings will be of especial interest. Paris places a strong place to zibeline broadcloth. The stores are showing them in different weights and besides those that are perfectly plain and positively lovely, there are other weaves with an attractive wavy patterning or faint effect of stripes. Amazon broadcloths are also featured for coats.

Cashmere wool in a heavy curled effect that suggests astrakhan is another darling of the coat fabric family. It is shown in plain and in fancy versions, such as diagonals and chevrons. The plain ones have a silvery frosted effect.

Among other weaves of prominence for fall and winter coats are vigogne, soft cashmere weaves, wool velours and chinchilla. Sheer metal cloth comes to the fore very prominently again this season as one of the most popular mediums for elaborate evening costumes when combined with luxurious furs when used for wraps and generally lined with right velvet in contrasting shade.

Longer Dresses

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They help cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets.

Coat Lengths Rise Skirts Drop

By LUCY CLAIRE
Fashion Expert for Central Press

While we are intrigued watching the skirt lengths go down, it is quite as intriguing to note that coat lengths are going up. This is the natural outcome of cause and effect. As mentioned before in these articles, the lengthened skirt is responsible for the change in silhouette, and the shortened coat length is not an illusion created by the lengthened skirt, leaving the coat where it was before, but making it appear much shorter. It is an actual subtraction from the coat length as a solution of what to do about the long, irregular skirt line now in vogue for daytime wear.

Not that the long coat is out of fashion. The shorter coats have scarcely arrived as yet, except in jacket form and for evening wear, but many of the smart women seen at the Ritz and other smart places in New York have adopted the shorter coat for wear with the dipped in the back and other irregular skirt-lines.

The coats are perhaps a trifle shorter than the regulation three-quarter length as we have known it, and may be quite plain and tailored or more dressy and flared. Fur coats are being made up in this style, and the fur jacket is coming back both for afternoon and for sports wear. Several of the foremost Paris houses are showing fur jackets with dresses. A brown and yellow tweed frock, for instance, has a brown baby lamb jacket lined with the tweed.

Straightline coats, anywhere from the skirt, are frequently seen among the tweed ensembles. The color contrast is not so often seen in the afternoon ensembles. Fur borders are a feature of many short afternoon coats. It is in the evening wraps that we again meet the contrast of color. Maggy Rouff and Lelong endorse the fashion of white evening frocks under wraps of some rich shade of velvet, deep violet, for instance.

In the full length coats many of the morning models remain straightline and are belted. In none of the coats in the princess line over-emphasized, though its influence is strongly felt. The flare in full length models, and they occasionally carry the dip in the back.

The sketch illustrates the three types of coats. The first is in the silhouette of the three-quarter afternoon coat worn with the irregular hemline. The second is a jacket of fur by Chanel, with little rippling capes over the shoulders, and the third is a favorite model for the full length coat, also developed in fur. This last is of brown caracul in a wrap-around model, showing the princess influence, and slightly longer at the back and sides. The high standing collar is of blue fox, while the deep cuffs are of the caracul.

been regarded as an insurgent in the ranks of banking heads because of his action in "saving the market" in August by rushing in a supply of call money (at 20 per cent) and thus incurring the condemnation of the powers-that-be behind the reserve system and certain senatorial cliques at Washington. His sensational achievement in raising the resources of the city bank from upon a billion dollars to two and a quarter billions over a period of seven years, and making it the world's biggest banking institution, doubtless entitles Mr. Mitchell to more than ordinary consideration in dealing with these great problems.

Mr. Mitchell was quoted this week as saying that though in some cases speculation has gone too, far, the American stock markets are in healthy condition. Many of the industrial stocks, he says, are now at price levels which would have been considered sound and conservative even by the standards of ten years ago, and stock values at present have a sound basis in the general prosperity of our country. Mr. Mitchell, it need hardly be said is a bull.

Colonel Ayers elects to emphasize, in his statement, the bad behavior of the market since the end of January, rather than indulge in any broad forecast of its probable action this year. The "creeping bear market," concealed in part by the enthusiastic sky-rocketing of a few favored industrials and utilities, he tells us, has steadily and persistently carried prices of more than 50 per cent of listed stocks to lower, lower, lowest, levels. Thousands of speculators in New York and elsewhere need no reminder of that fact. Their inability to make an honest penny in the market, while their slender resources gradually dwindle to the vanishing point, is evidence aplenty of their faulty judgment in picking the winners in an extremely selective market.

The sages have spoken. In principle, they are in agreement. Without healthy industrial and financial conditions there can be no prosperity, and without prosperity security prices cannot rise. In the last analysis, corporation earnings are the only safe yard stick of security values, and thus once again we have had presented the danger of placing too high an appraisal on prospects.

The daily swing of prices on the stock exchange reflects chiefly the play of swiftly changing economic and market factors on speculative opinion. Without a wide variety of opinion there would be no horse races, no dog fights and no stock market. As long as opinions vary, some traders will go short on stock which others believe to be cheap at the price. When great minds differ, there is little ground for criticism of apparent inconsistencies of men of smaller calibre.

CHATTY—GODDESS OF GAB

CHAPTER LVII

Chatty's new position, she soon found, was a very responsible one, and demanded much more attention than did the phones in Mr. Van Nuys' office.

The firm was larger, to begin with. Three phone girls instead of one were required to do much more than merely make connections.

"You must learn the names of all the customers," her instructor told her, "and be able to recognize their voice. To be able to say 'yes, Mr. Jones,' or 'I'll find out for you, Mr. Smith' is a great asset to you, and helps the office. Customers like to be recognized. It makes them feel important."

Chatty found herself occupied in a new way; learning to listen instead of talk; listening, not to see what she could find out to tell, but to memorize and be useful.

"It isn't enough just to tell Mr. Smith that whoever he wants isn't here. You must make an effort to find him!" was another maxim laid down for her. "Tell the customer you will try to locate the man he wants. Never leave his line more than thirty seconds without speaking to him; say 'I'm trying to locate Mr. Tolson, Mr. Smith.' Be pleasant. Have a smile in your voice. A good telephone girl makes friends for the firm. And if you are good at it, they'll pay you well!"

Chatty discovered that the senior girl on the telephone desk was paid eighteen hundred a year; not because she was any better operator than any other girl, but because of her tact, sympathy, understanding, memory for names and attractive way of speaking.

Chatty made up her mind that she, too, would learn to be worth eighteen hundred a year.

It was not done without effort. Old habits are not broken off short without a protest.

There was plenty of opportunity to gossip. Over the phone came all sorts of news; friendly news, gossip news, scandalous news. Chatty had the impulse to discuss it with the other girls, to tell the interesting things she overheard.

But she did not. Nor did she commit the sin of "listening in" except for business purposes. It was very difficult, sometimes, not to do so; when Mr. Tolson called a woman on the phone, for instance, Chatty wanted very much to know whether it was business or—not business. Mr. Tolson was married.

But she sternly repressed the desire.

"I got into all the trouble I'm ever going to get in!" she told herself. "I do no more listening, talking, chattering!"

When the girls in the office came to her for information they received a smile and an "I'm sorry, I don't know, really—"

They soon learned that the "new girl" was "not a talker."

"You'll get small change out of Chatty!" she heard one girl say to another. "She just doesn't—or won't—tell anything!"

Chatty smiled, well pleased.

It was not the reputation she had had, before.

Chatty was lonely.

Billie married was Billie extra sweet and kind—but George demanded much time and attention. Instead of seeing her almost every day, Chatty saw her once a week.

Winnie, married, had gone to another city to live.

Agnes called her up once a week to ask her how she was getting along. But, Agnes, too, had her own interests, and there was no reason, reflected Chatty, why Agnes, who had been forgiving and kind, should make an intimate friend of her.

Her mother—oh, well, mothers are mothers! Dear and kind and sweet, but belonging to another generation, and not wholly understanding this one. Chatty could not open all her heart to her mother, as she might to Billie had Billie not had her hands and heart full of the business of being a bride and establishing a new home.

Billie was full of news—of furniture and wall paper, rugs and wedding presents, George's manifold perfections. She was not—at least to Chatty's lonely heart—approachable with sorrowful confidences about being hungry, hungry for something she could not have—

It was not an easy time for Chatty. Had she not, deep down in her heart, possessed real character and real courage, she might easily have fallen a prey to some skillful wooer of the Bryant Dunning type.

She had many chances to "go out on a party." The bond salesmen here were no different from those elsewhere; many of them young, good looking, unattached, anxious for a good time, and with plenty of money to buy it.

But Chatty turned her back on all such offers. She saw none among them whose image could compare to that enshrined in black in her heart. And she would not again cheapen herself by trading kisses for dances, petting parties or a wild time, necking for liquor.

"No thank you, I don't think I will—" was her invariable answer to those who begged her to go on a joy ride, or an expedition to the Lollypop Inn.

She hated the very thought of the Lollypop. When George bought Billie a little car, and Billie in the kindness of her heart, asked Chatty if she would like to drive it, Chatty shuddered away from the idea.

"I never, never, never want to sit at the wheel again!" she cried. "Oh, Billie, suppose, suppose those had not healed!"

She pointed to to the scars on Billie's face—the scars that soon would no longer be scars.

Chatty tried not to get morbid.

But there was that in her heart which made it very difficult not to be.

Continual thinking of one subject, one unattainable desire, is apt to make anyone morbid.

David was never long out of Chatty's thoughts. She found his name, now and then, in the paper; he was elected president of the local chapter of bank clerks; he was elected a director of the bank; he was talked of as vice president of the Civic Association.

She looked guilty, both ways, then stopped to examine it, her heart in her eyes. If she could only have one for her own!

But she did not try to buy one. She knew that the photographer might ask questions. To have David know that she had tried to buy his picture—that would, indeed, be the uttermost shame.

Every day for nine days thereafter she went to the show case, to look at his picture.

After the ninth day it was gone. Another man's face was in its place.

Chatty felt as if something lovely had been taken from her life.

Chatty's dress and facial make up underwent as drastic a change as her mental outlook. She used but a tiny bit of rouge, a little powder. The mascara she threw away. Her skirts were no longer shorter than the style. She bought quieter things.

"I'll be as much as I can what he used to like!" she told herself. "It's all I can do for him."

Somehow, dressing to suit David made it a little easier to bear.

But then came a voice over the telephone which made it harder to bear; David's voice!

Chatty could have recognized it among a million. Habit is strong; having been taught to answer phone calls by names when possible she said, "Yes, Mr. Jordon, I'll find him for you," when he asked for Mr. Tolson.

"How do you know my name?" he shot back over the phone. Evidently he had not recognized her voice.

"Did I make a mistake?" she apologized. "I was quite sure—I'm sorry!"

"No mistake. I'm Jordon. But I don't understand—"

"This is Chatty," she answered, simply. "Here is Mr. Tolson now—' Chatty cut out her key so she could not hear that tormenting, lovely, desired voice.

Her hands trembled so that it was hard to make the next phone connection.

David now knew where she worked. And—he had found it out without her meaning to tell him—it just happened that way. Would anything else happen? Inside of Chatty a queer little half hope formed. If he called up, might he not sometimes come to the office—on business?

FEDERAL RAIDS MAY CAUSE "FAMINE"; CAPTURE FORTRESS

"fixers," gunmen, racketeers and sluggers. The organization has been functioning smoothly for a long time.

The equipment of the syndicate included six vessels in regular service between the Atlantic coast, Canada and Bermuda. Each vessel was equipped to carry 3,000 cases of liquor. The contraband was taken off near the American shores by speed boats and delivered to trucks at obscure points.

Four raids were made in New York City, where the syndicate maintained sales headquarters in West Forty-Third St., not far from Broadway. Most of the raids were along the New Jersey coast line. The biggest seizure of men and material was made at "headquarters," at Highlands, N. J.

The stronghold of the organization at Highlands was equipped like a fort. On a hill, overlooking the approaches to the place, were machine guns imbedded in concrete. A view of the surrounding country could be obtained from a cupola lookout atop the house. There were underground trenches and big garages for the storing of trucks.

For months, the federal authorities have been trying to break up the ring. The first inkling that such a lawless group of bootleggers were operating came through an insistent radio sending station near Highlands, which never gave its license number in its messages. The messages were intercepted and, after much effort, decoded. Soon the authorities knew all about the syndicate's boats, their operators, their method of procedure and their properties.

Radio operator MacMaster was caught at his post. A mile from the wireless station a large body of agents climbed to a hill-top and seized a veritable fortress. Sawed-off shot-guns, sub-machine guns, tear gas bombs and a variety of pistols were among the material captured. A big cave in the side of the hill apparently was used for storage purposes.

Along the 200-mile stretch of coast line embraced by the government operations, warehouses, landing stages, storage buildings and sales rooms fell into the hands of the authorities in the simultaneously-staged raids.

"Mannie" Kessler's arrest was a surprise. It had been thought that since his release from Atlanta, where he had served a two-year term for bootlegging, he had "gone straight." He was once known as the wealthiest bootlegger in the world. He "did time" in Atlanta at the same time George Remus, the Cincinnati "king of the bootleggers," served his sentence there. They were friends. Remus, since he was acquitted in the murder of his wife, Imogene, has been in no way identified with bootlegging. He is living quietly in Cincinnati.

Kessler was credited with having amassed a fortune of $10,000,000 when he was sentenced to Atlanta but he insisted when he was released that it was "only paper." He had lived in luxury when his bootlegging operations were at their height. Lamps were "Mannie's" passion. He was forever attending auctions. In his rooms at a New York hotel he would have as many as ten lamps lit at a time.

BRINGING UP FATHER — By GEORGE McMANUS

The Theater

Mrs. Lita Gray Chaplin, divorced second wife of Charlie Chaplin, film comedian, and Phil Baker, stage comedian, are engaged to be married, according to word received by friends in the movie colony.

Mrs. Chaplin is now in Milwaukee, Wis., on a vaudeville tour. Baker is widely known and for many years has been in the New York Winter Garden show under the direction of the Shuberts. He met Mrs. Chaplin, who is the mother of two children, in Hollywood two years ago.

Mrs. Chaplin was a film actress before her unhappy marriage to the "screen's greatest comedian" but their romance split on the rock of domestic incompatibility. Mrs. Chaplin has been filling a vaudeville engagement for a year, having appeared at Dayton last winter, where she was taken ill.

And here we have Miss Nancy Welford, all dressed up for her leading role in "Gold Diggers of Broadway." Looks as if she could dig gold out of misers, doesn't she?

Hollywood, where many married women have careers, has undertaken to answer Adela Rogers St. John, magazine writer, who holds that the modern woman is a failure.

Most of the wives of film celebrities maintain that a woman can have a career and babies and do well by both. However, the concensus seems to be that the right woman, no matter how humble her lot, is the force that keeps the right man going.

Natalie Moorehead, actress, said girls try careers to soothe the pangs of disappointed love. Louise Fazenda, eccentric comedienne and character woman, finds her friends deserting careers to make homes, responding to life's oldest urge.

Ken Maynard, western star, thought if all women had good allowances there would be fewer of them striking out for themselves. Robert Armstrong's idea was that wealthy homes were more apt to hold the woman than humble ones, where housework is drudgery.

Mr. and Mrs. James Gleason did not exactly agree. The stage and screen comedian doffed a complimentary hat to the modern female and warned men to snap it up or lose their positions in the business world. Mrs. Gleason said that "men owe their positions in the business world to women. The successful men are all married."

Since men in real life are not notoriously sweet singers, barring a bathroom ditty or barbershop chord, why must actors in sound pictures have operatic voices? It's getting so Bull Montana will have to warble "Love's Old Sweet Song" or some other piece, if he gets a job in the films. Robert Armstrong will sing to Fannie Brice in "The Champ" and let the high notes fall where they list.

MOST ATTRACTIVE FEATURING SCARFS

This time in reporting what is new in the line of fall accessories we'll start at the top and work down—for instance, first, we'll tell you about the new scarfs that smart women will wear; then in turn, we'll give you all the last minute information on jewelry, gloves, handbags, hosiery and shoes.

All Kinds of Scarfs

The scarfs of fall go to all lengths and designs to please the woman of fashion. Perhaps the most important scarf being shown by the local shops is one of Chanel's—finished with pointed and diagonal ends in both double and single thicknesses. Some of the scarfs are accompanied by a bag of the matching fabric. Checks, stripes and plaid designs seem to be the most in favor.

Large Silk Squares

Lanvin has sent us some large silk squares patterned with hand-blocked modern designs placed diagonally across the square as his contribution to the fall scarf mode. One we saw was of Copenhagen, navy blue and tan colorings and another was done in tan, brown and capucine.

New Jewelry Ideas

We predict that you will get just as much fun out of browsing around the new jewelry sections of the stores as we did. There are all sorts of new ideas offered for the new season and not the least among these are the semi-precious stones set in marcasite which to our way of thinking are fit for a queen and are really very inexpensive. The rings in particular took our eye and we saw some pendant necklaces that would be stunning for the matron.

Spanish Influence

No apparel or accessories seems to have escaped the influence of the Barcelona exposition in Spain—and certainly not jewelry. One very interesting necklace and bracelet set we saw as in combinations of metal with red, yellow and black predominating.

New Gloves

You will see much fancy stitching in the new fall gloves. You will also see that the tailored cuff type is the important type, featuring prominently leather appliques alone or in combination with a pearl blue button or a buckle trim.

Smart Handbags

The handbag buyers in the majority of the shops here informed us that it is their opinion that women will favor underarm and envelope types for fall. We should n't wonder, either, since the designers have made these two types so attractive. Bags with hookless fasteners and vagabond shapes in our humble opinion will be very important. Several of the finer bags we saw were of brown calf, offset by discreet bandings in darker tones. One of these had a metal fastening in gold and silver.

New Hosiery Shades

The hosiery colors for fall are greatly influenced by the furs that trim the new coats. There is a shade called rose dust that has a strong mauve influence and will harmonize beautifully with blue fox furs. This particular shade will also harmonize very nicely with the purple-red range of costume fabrics. Then there is mocca that was created to match brown fox furs. And so on.

Concerning Shoes

Sable brown and black are the big two in shoe colors for fall. The sable brown has a delightful beige cast and sable black assumes a gunmetal tone. Gunmetal, by the way, is invariably used as a trimming on black shoes.

Mrs. Eva Godfrey Mulligan, of New Milford, Conn., with her children, Joseph, seven; Leslie, three, and Agnes, five, after police had taken her two other boys, —Johnnie, nine, and Jimmie, seven, to the New Haven, Conn., jail, where they are said to have confessed to one of the most fiendish murders ever entered on a police blotter. According to the alleged confession of the two boys, it was they who tortured and then killed three-year-old Albert Mikenas, near New Milford, Conn., on July 29th. Police had been of the opinion that the little chap had been murdered by an arch fiend of powerful strength, but in view of the story told by the youngsters, they are inclined to believe that the mystery has been solved.

CONDUCT DRIVE TO BLOCK DIPHTHERIA

A campaign to immunize Greene County school children against diphtheria is being planned by the Greene County District Health Department.

Under the supervision of Dr. R. H. Grube, county health commissioner, and Mrs. Pearl Wittenmeyer, county public health nurse, assisted by physicians of each community, many children of Bellbrook and Spring Valley schools have already been vaccinated against the disease, it is announced. The immunization campaign will next be carried to Jamestown schools.

In the next few days each pupil will be furnished a letter addressed to his parents or guardian, reading as follows:

"Woul you like to know that your children are protected from diphtheria? This can be done without expense to you if you will sign the permission slip attached to this letter.

"Nearly six hundred children die of diphtheria every year in Ohio and about 9,000 become seriously ill with the disease.

"Some children are naturally protected from diphtheria, many are not. Those who are protected can be separated from the susceptible by means of the Schick test, which consists of the injection of a drop of the test solution in the skin of the arm. A slight redness will appear on the arm of those who are not protected.

"Those who are not protected are given three injections of a protective mixture, each injection consisting of fifteen drops. In from three to six months 85 per cent of the children so injected will be protected from diphtheria. The test is harmless, so are the injections. Over two hundred thousand children have been Schick tested and more than one hundred and thirty thousand immunized in Ohio, and over six hundred and fifty thousand in New York without a single bad result. In New York six hundred lives a year have been saved by this means.

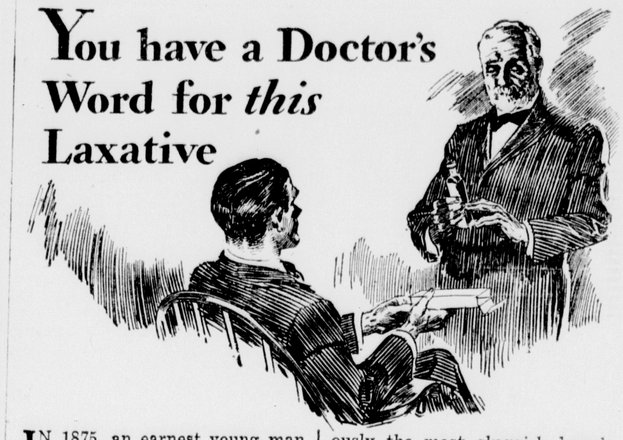

"Your children, who are too young to go to school, should also be protected. It is not necessary to Schick test them as nearly all children under six are susceptible. All children under ten years should be immunized without the preliminary test.

"Ask your family physician for active immunization against diphtheria. Help us get rid of diphtheria by signing the slip and so protecting your children."

Japan, England, France, Belgium, Ireland, Scotland and several South American countries are expected to send delegates to the annual meeting of the American Bar Association, at Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 23. Gurney E. Newlin, left, Los Angeles attorney, is president of the association, and, Henry Upson Sims, Birmingham, Ala., right, regarded as a possible successor to Newlin in office.

You have a Doctor's Word for this Laxative

IN 1875, an earnest young man began to practice medicine. As a family doctor, he treated many cases of constipation. He soon saw the harm in common purges and began to seek something better. Out of his experience was born a famous prescription now in wide use.

This prescription was written thousands of times. It proved an ideal laxative for old and young. Children like its pleasant taste. Older people like it because it doesn't gripe or cause discomfort. It is a mixture of fresh herbs and other pure ingredients; thoroughly effective for the most robust of men. Stimulates the normal muscular action of the bowels. So its use will not become a habit. As people saw how marvelously the most sluggish bowels are started and bad breath, headaches, biliousness, feverishness, or no energy, poor appetite, etc., are relieved by Dr. Caldwell's prescription, it became necessary to put it up ready for use.

Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is the world's most popular laxative. All drug stores have the generous bottles. The product never varies from Dr. Caldwell's original formula. So you can take it with confidence or give it to the youngest child.

HUGE LIQUOR SYNDICATE REVEALED

Stocks Will Swing With Industrial Conditions

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. — Within the past three weeks, five of the "big names" in American financial and economic circles have been heard from, in no indefinite terms, with respect to past, present and possible future actions of the stock market. Speculators on both sides of the fence have their ears ready to catch a word that mignt substantiate their position in the market, or direct their buying and selling activities over the balance of the year.

Roger Babson, the sage of Wellesley Hills, is a statistician and forecaster of high repute, with an enormous following among bankers, security experts, insurance company officials, as well as plain, ordinary citizens with speculative leanings. Mr. Babson told us a few weeks ago of an impending crash in the market, compared with which former smashes in security values did not deserve to reckon. The early-October break of mild proportions followed immediately the Babson blast.

Arthur Cutten of Chicago, a comparatively late addition to the ranks of American capitalists, and whose opinion on stock values is eagerly sought on any and all occasions, took issue with Babson. Mr. Cutten backed up his statement by the assertion that he had not sold a share of stock, and would continue to accumulate rather than to dispose of stock.

Mr. Cutten may therefore be rated a bull, but not a market operator in the general accepted sense of that term. He is a long-pull investor in equity stocks of American corporations and must therefore think in terms of the distant future rather than next week or next month.

Profesor Irving Fisher of Yale University, also a widely-quoted economist of note, may be listed as the perpetual challenger of the bearish statements of Babson and others, since, whenever such statements are broadcasted, Mr. Fisher is Johnny-on-the-spot to present his side of the story. In brief the Yale professor, while deprecating the enormous amount of margin speculating now going on, says there is no likelihood of a stock market break of major proportions.

Of a distinctly different type are Charles E. Mitchell, the head of the world's largest banking institution and Leonard P. Ayers, of the Clevelad Trust Company, both of whom have gained a reputation for uncanny accuracy in security market forecasts. Mr. Mitchell has

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Following a blast in a restaurant and another in a garage, Cook County counted its bombs today and found that it has had a total of 104 since January 1.

One of the bombs last night tore away the rear stairs of the Golden Lily Cafe and spread terror among the customers. The damage was estimated at $1,500. Labor trouble was said by police to have been the cause.

The other exploded in a four-car garage at Oak Park, a suburb. This was the third of such blasts within a four block radius in the last ten weeks.

WITNESS IN MURDER CASE DEFIES ORDER TO LEAVE STEAMER

Second Mate Now Involved In Probe of Kraft Death

NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct. 17.—Capt. E. W. Sundstrom of the steamship Creole today had balked the efforts of District Attorney Leander Perez and Sheriff Alberti to secure Second Officer John McGouldrick, sought in connection with the mysterious murder of Jack Kraft, New York newspaperman.

Sheriff Alberti swore out a warrant for the arrest of McGouldrick but when he sent his deputy aboard the Creole at Pilot Town last night Captain Sundstrom refused to give up the second mate, claiming he could not proceed to sea without a second officer under maritime law.

"If you want McGouldrick you will have to take him off the ship at New York," said Capt. Sundstrom. As a result the Creole, the ship from which Kraft was reported to have leaped to his death into the Mississippi, is sailing with the second officer aboard.

McGouldrick's arrest was ordered after the district attorney was handed a letter purported to have been written by Ione Ord, New York artist and traveling companion of Kraft to McCormick.

The letter, according to the district attorney, read:

"Mac: Though I didn't see you even to say goodbye, and things look pretty black, my promise still holds. I haven't changed my mind. Remain the same on the subject we talked about at the hotel the last evening I saw you and as soon as I am cleared of all this I'll write you and we can make plans."

Miss Ord and Sam Epstein, ship's steward, both of whom are held, were taken to Nairn to view Kraft's body. Authorities admitted both had been given a stiff grilling.

Kraft at first was reported to have leaped overboard and drowned, but an inquest revealed he had been shot through the heart and had died before his body reached the water.

OTTAWA RECEIVES BRITISH PREMIER

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 17.— This dominion capital was keenly stirred today in anticipation of the visit of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, who was expected to arrive here this morning from Toronto.

Mr. MacDonald's stay here is expected to be the high point in his tour of Canada before returning to England from his good-will mission to the United States.

Following these conferences, he is expected to make an important announcement relative to some practical measures affecting the doctrine of "freedom of the seas" which he discussed with President Hoover at Washington.

COMEDIAN ENDS LIFE

A COMEDIAN on the stage, William Bucklin Merriam, 49, 708 N. 31st St., Billings, Mont., member of a vaudeville troupe playing an engagement at the village opera house in Osborn, enacted a tragic role when he committed suicide by blowing out his brains with a bullet fired from a .32 caliber revolver at 4:30 p. m., Wednesday.

Merriam left a farewell note, written on a large piece of cardboard, in which he blamed his wife, Eva, for the act and gave a hint that the "eternal triangle" may have been indirectly the cause.

The note, addressed to his wife, read: "Dear Eva—You can take the blame for all this. Davenport must know who is the cause." The message was signed "Bill" and underneath the signature Merriam added: "Take care of my kids," again signing his name.

A store room on the second floor of the opera house was the scene of the shooting. The shot was heard by Gilbert Howard, a member of the troupe who was back-stage and who discovered the body slumped in a corner. Beside the body was the note and under the right hand was a revolver.

Coroner Chambliss learned that Merriam's wife had left him several hours previously. Her destination was some city in Illinois, where she was expected to arrive Thursday.

The coroner interprets the note to indicate the two had quarreled earlier in the day and that another man whose first or last name is Davenport, had replaced Merriam in his wife's affections.

Merriam had packed several trunks and apparently had planned to follow his wife, according to Coroner Chambliss.

The troupe had been presenting daily shows at the opera house for several days and a performance was supposed to have been given Wednesday evening. It was called off.

The body was taken in charge by Morris and Sons, Osborn funeral directors, and an attempt will be made to communicate with the widow in Illinois.

Coroner Chambliss intends to make a further investigation of the case, he said.

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT TO COST $40,000,000 NEXT YEAR

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Prohibition enforcement will cost Uncle Sam approximately $40,000,000 next year, according to 1931 budget figures virtually approved today.

While the coast guard appropriation has not been finally determined, the total sum for enforcement to be allocated to the various agencies will not be much different than last year, although some increases were sought. The budget bureau made cuts wherever possible, since President Hoover urged that the total appropriations be kept as low as possible.

The prohibition bureau proper has been allowed about $15,000,000, the customs bureau $12,000,000, while the coast guard will get from $28,000,000 to $30,000,000, about half of which goes toward anti-smuggling operations against rum runners. About $1,500,000 of the customs service appropriation will be devoted to prohibition work.

An additional $10,000,000 will be used in prohibition enforcement by the various branches of the department of justice, principally in offices of the United States attorneys and in the upkeep of federal prisoners.

The 1930 budget carries $28,000,000 for the coast guard, but some additional funds may be authorized for cutters. A program of building ten cutters, principally to replace those which are becoming obsolete, is about completed. Five have been put in service, three are under construction and bids will be taken on the ninth within a short time.

GRAND JURY PROBES ACCUSATIONS MADE ABOUT INSTITUTIONS

Welfare Worker Is Heard; Mrs. Elton Denies Charges

DELAWARE, O., Oct. 17.—The Delaware County grand jury, which is probing alleged cruelty, immorality, drinking and the theft of state property at the Girls' Industrial School, near here, entered the second day of its special session today.

Only one witness was called yesterday. Mrs. Ida McCorkle, of Circleville, who is said to have been an employe of the state welfare department, went before the jurors and she was questioned for more than two hours.

Information she gave the deliberating body could not be learned. Every precaution has been taken to guard against any leakage of news from the grand jury room.

W. W. Hill, Delaware County's youthful prosecutor, is leading the investigation. It was he who started the probe by his statements that he had heard of irregularities at the girl's correctional school.

Mrs. J. P. Elton, matron of the home, has denied all charges which have been made and said the reports were started by disgruntled discharged employes.

GASTONIA TRIAL REACHES JURY SOON

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 17. — The fate of Fred Erwin Beal, generalissimo of the Gastonia strike, and six of his aides, charged with murdering Police Chief O. F. Aderholt and the wounding of three other officers probably will be decided Saturday.

The voluminous testimony that has required more than two weeks to be presented was concluded yesterday. Today and tomorrow — probably the final days of the lengthy trial—will be consumed by summations before the jury composed largely of farmers.

All arguments must be concluded by Friday night as Judge M. V. Barnhill has limited each side to six hours. Whether Judge Barnhill will make his charge Friday night or wait until Saturday morning is not known.

EARL SANDE TAKES SINGING LESSONS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Earl Sande, the country's premier jockey, is taking singing lessons from a capital music teacher, presumably with the idea of doing concert work when his turf days are over.

"Earl has a beautiful tenor," said Miss Estelle Wentworth, his teacher. "He has a better voice than nine out of ten who have been training for years."

COOLIDGE, SMITH, ROSENWALD MANAGE HUGE CHARITY FUND

"Labor Of Love" Brings Three Colorful Men Together

NEW YORK, Oct. 17. — Calvin Coolidge, Alfred E. Smith and Julius Rosenwald are working together on what Smith today termed "a labor of love for us three." It is the administration of an $8,000,000 fund left by Conrad Hubert, pioneer manufacturer.

An announcement is to be made soon giving details of the fund and its method of administration. Mr. Coolidge, Republican and a Protestant; Mr. Smith, Democrat and a Roman Catholic, and Mr. Rosenwald, a philanthropist of the Jewish faith, have been meeting at luncheon in the financial district here about once a month since July. At these meetings, described by Smith as "most delightful," they have discussed best methods for administering the fund.

Mr. Coolidge Mr. Smith and Mr. Rosenwald have been co-operating with the Bankers Trust Company on details of the fund.

Greasing Skids For Conference Is Important Task

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—With all of the powers on record today as willing to participate in the London naval conference, the really important and highly delicate part of the undertaking is to get under way immediately. This involves the adjustment of divergent views, and the ironing out of as many obstacles as possible before the conference actually meets.

It is still three months before the delegates assemble in London. This period is considered here as a sort of diplomatic interlude, a period of careful preparation and adjustment.

Just as Great Britain and the United States were able, by private negotiation, to settle virtually all their differences before the invitations went out, so are Premier MacDonald and President Hoover hopeful that the same private negotiation in the next three months will see Franco-Italian differences yield to adjustment, and many of the obstacles cleared away that now loom so menacingly in the pathway of the conference.

In the British call for the conference, all of the powers were invited to utilize this three months' period for an exchange of opinion between themselves. All of them took note of it and accepted. Consequently the next three months are going to witness a vast amount of private dickering in London, Paris, and Rome.

ROME FLYERS TRY NON-STOP FLIGHT

ROME, Oct. 17. — Commander Maddalena and Lieut. Ceconi, famous Italian fliers, today took off in a Savoia-Marchetti plane in an attempt to establish a new world's record for a non-stop, non-refueling flight.

The present record of sixty-five hours and twenty-five minutes is held by the German aviators, Risticz and Zimmerman.

In today's flight, Maddalena is preparing for a projected trans-Atlantic flight to New York in the middle of November, it was said.

Four other planes are also being groomed here for trans-Atlantic flights as General Italo Balbo, minister of aeronautics, is anxious to keep his promise to Lewis Yancey and Roger Q. Williams, to return the air visit of the Americans.

Inasmuch as the writing is to be bound, a uniform paper will be used. Fifty verses will be assigned to each of the writers.

Luncheon Clubs Sponsor Visit Of Planes Here

Operating under the direction of the American Society for Promotion of Aviation, four green and gold airplanes of the Empire Air Circus, now on national tour to stimulate interest in aviation, will stage a three-day series of demonstrations in Xenia, it was announced today.

According to advance representatives, the personnel of the organization will have headquarters at the J. Weir Cooper farm field, Dayton Pike, just west of the city, next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Xenia Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs are jointly sponsoring the visit to Xenia.

A comprehensive program, which will include the dropping of prizes and free tickets, noon exhibitions over the city, and free demonstrations at the Cooper field, has been arranged. Details will be announced later.

Not only will residents of Xenia and vicinity have an opportunity to watch famous pilots at their work, but also will have a chance to "fly at cost"—the lowest rate in history. The nominal fee is made possible by the leasing and subsidization of the Empire planes by the aviation society. Heads of the society believe that the best way to "sell" aviation is to get as many persons off the ground as possible.

The program will open at noon Wednesday, shortly after the planes and equipment arrive here from Mansfield.

Flying in diamond and line formation, the pilots will send their ships zooming over the city. There will be vertical banks, "grape-vines", mass loops, reversements and other military and commercial maneuvers.

Then each pilot will unleash his own bag of tricks. The stunts will include practically every one known to aviation.

Each afternoon at the Cooper field there will be aerial acrobatics, stunt flying, "dead stick" landings and parachute jumps, all designed to show the safety of aviation.

There will be no admission or parking charges for these exhibitions, and the public is invited to the field, which will be properly policed to protect all spectators from injury.

The Empire Air Circus has been on tour for the past three months, and has visited twenty-five cities, giving eighty-five exhibitions before almost a million persons and carrying more than 35,000 passengers.

The airplanes coming here were manufactured according to United States Department of Commerce specifications, and subsequently were licensed. None is more than three months old.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.— The jury sitting in the Fall bribery case will hear the story today of how "one old friend came to loan another $100,000."

E. L. Doheny, California oil magnate, and his wife will take the witness stand and give their version of the transaction with Former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall which the government charges was a bribe to induce the ex-official to lease the Elk Hills naval oil reserve.

They will further explain to the jury that the note Fall gave for the money was mutilated to the extent of having his signature torn off because they feared they might both be killed simultaneously in a railroad wreck and they didn't want any foreclosure on their old friend at a time he couldn't repay.

And when their direct examination at the hands of Frank J. Hogan, chief defense attorney, has been concluded, Doheny will be subjected to a gruelling cross-examination by Prosecutor Owen J. Robert in an effort to ascertain why he remained silent for several months when the United States senate was trying to find out where Fall got the $100,000.

Senator's Secretary Is Representative Of Manufacturers

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—The peculiar circumstances under which Charles L. Eyanson, a paid manufacturers agent, attended secret sessions of the senate finance committee while it fixed rates in the new tariff bill, will be aired by the senate's lobby investigating committee.

While lobbies have flourished in Washington for many decades, official records disclose no parallel to the Eyanson case. He attended the finance committee's secret sessions for two days as the apparent secretary to Senator Hiram Bingham (R) of Connecticut. When other Republican senators learned his identity, he was uncerimoniously expelled. In the meantime, he drew government pay as a clerk to Bingham's senatorial committee and an annual salary from the Connecticut Manufacturers Association.

Eyanson was called as a witness, along with Robert C. Buell, secretary-treasurer of the Connecticut association, to learn more about his tariff activities in and out of the secret tariff sessions. The investigators wanted, too, to learn the truth about reports that Eyanson even helped to fix certain rates in the new bill.

MASONS END MEET

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 17.—The delegates of the 127th annual communication of the grand lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of Ohio, are enroute to their homes today following the concluding business session late last night.

J. P. McCune, of Columbus, was elevated from venerable vice president to president of the order.

FEDERAL RAIDS MAY CAUSE "FAMINE"; CAPTURE FORTRESS

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—One of the biggest liquor smuggling syndicates operating since the Volstead law went into effect was broken up today as a result of a spectacular offensive by the federal government. Thirty-five raids were carried out simultaneously along a 200-mile "front" extending from Atlantic City to the eastern tip of Long Island.

Thirty-two persons were arrested, including Emanuel ("Manny") Kessler, who at one time was known as "the king of the bootleggers." It was believed that "Manny," a picturesque and colorful character, had retired after "doing a stretch" in the Atlanta federal pentientiary five years ago with other infamous American bootleggers.

The liquor "ring," which supplied booze to the entire East, had its headquarters in a mansion on an estate at Highlands, N. J., which had been fortified with ammunition, firearms nad machine gun emplacements. It was honeycombed with underground vaults and passages in which huge quantities of wines and liquor were stored.

The liquor syndicate operated a fleet of rum ships between the Atlantic coast and St. Pierre Miquelon, off Canada, and also to and from Bermuda. The radio operator at the stronghold of the bootleggers at Highlands was "talking" with one of the ring's big freighters, bringing in 5,000 cases of "good Canadian liquor" at the time the raids were staged.

Seized in his fortress known as "The Mansion" to the people of Highlands, "Manny" Kessler, a squat, little man, smiled genially but refused to talk. Neither he nor his companions captured at headquarters made any attempt to resist arrest. Malcolm McMaster, radio operator, would not talk, either. One of Kessler's well-known lieutenants, Morris Sweetwood, was also taken into custody, as was Patrick Conners, a clerk in a swanky Atlantic City hotel.

The wholesale raids are of such major importance that New York City is now facing a "booze famine," it was admitted by night club owners here. The raids were the result of weeks of careful planning and were participated in by seventy-five treasury agents, thirty-five deputy United States marshals and twenty New Jersey state troopers.

The machinery of the syndicate was geared to smuggle in as much as 10,000 cases of liquor a week, according to unofficial estimates. In cut form, as the booze reaches the consumer, it would be double that amount. And on the basis of present retail prices this quantity would mean a turnover of $1,000,000 a week, although the wholesale price charged by the ring would be much lower. The syndicate is believed to have supplied the bulk of liquor to New York and, in fact, to the entire northeast.

Federal officials say the personnel of the organization included skippers and seamen to man their fleet of vessels, men to handle the cargoes, "contact men" in charge of the speed boat fleet, truckmen, chauffeurs, warehouse operatives, wireless operators, office executives, salesmen, sales managers,

TAX AMENDMENT IS URGED AT MEETING

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 17.—Adoption of the proposed "limited taxation" amendment to the Ohio constitution is essential, if Buckeye state tax payers are to escape double taxation, L. B. Palmer, president of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation told the annual convention of the Ohio Building and Loan Association here last night. The convention is still in session today.

Governor Myers Y. Cooper, who also spoke at the opening of the conclave, warned his hearers against risking money in speculation ventures, such as the stock market, and advised investing it in real estate and other sound industries.

Reports from district representatives of the Building and Loan Association declared that business was "good" throughout Ohio. Among those who made the optimistic predictions of good business were Fred W. Arnold, Bellefontaine, George Ralston, Martins Ferry, and George Garthe, Lorain.

The convention is to close tomorrow afternoon.

SCHOOL'S "B AD BOY" WILL BE REFORMED

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 17.—Bert, the "bad boy" of South St. school, is going to be reformed.

Science is going to try its hand. Thirty years ago, Bert would have been flogged for the tricks he pulled.

Bert is the fifth grade "terror" in the school. He carries a knife and brandishes it at the other pupils. Once he stabbed a boy's hand with it, pushing the blade through his victim's palm.

Five teachers have "mixed" with Bert and have had scratches and bruises to show for the fights. Bert, laboring under some strange hallucination that he's the original "bad boy" even "put up his dukes," as he said it, with the principal of the school.

In his more peaceful moments, he contents himself with sitting at his desk in the school room, rolling back his lips and grinding his teeth, which sends chills right up and down the backs of other pupils. He is the most expert "paper-wad" shooter.

Bert was hauled into juvenile court here yesterday. He didn't seem much impressed and even had the boldness to grind his teeth at the judge.

The judge, had he been sitting in court thirty years ago, would probably have ordered Bert to a reform school, but he told juvenile authorities to place him under observation here.

Bert's tonsils and his adenoids will be taken out and other minor operations will be performed. He'll be made healthy and then his young brain will be given a chance to function normally.

Bert, the "bad boy" of South St. school is going to be reformed.

FOR WOMEN OF PERSONALITY

What a marvelous time the woman of fashion will have selecting her new fur coat for the incoming winter season. Never have fur coats shown such style variety, such clever combinations, such dramatic silhouettes. The coats this year were designed for women of personality for they are so individual in their styling, so much more feminine throughout.

The new fur coats are handled with the same graceful ease that is to be found in coats of satin and velvet. The manufacturers have gone to no ends to make the collection of fur coats for the season an unusually interesting one. They endorse, as does Paris, any number of silhouettes, princess lines, ripple flares, flounces and irregular hem lines are outstanding features.

Individuality Essential

Paris tells us individuality is absolutely essential in our new fur coat if we are to stand out from the mob, for women everywhere are demanding something new and something different in fur coat fashions and the stores and shops are ready. Never have we seen such a luxurious array of beautiful fur coats. It seems to us that there was a lot of attention paid to caracul.

Caracul Smart

One particularly interesting caracul coat was of the natural tip brown shade and this supple fur appears in a convertible swagger flared coat which may also be worn wrapped closely about the figure in the manner so much desired by the smart sophisticate with a flare for elegance, we saw a model favoring the flared line in a side movement with insertions of fullness outlined by lapp seams accented by a partial border of that heavenly silver fox.

New Hemlines

Now that we are on the subject of hemlines, we might as well tell you all about everything that we saw that was particularly new and particularly different. There was an ermine coat that had a band of the fur two skins wide gathered in a narrow ruffle outlining the bottom of the coat and reappearing about the wrists.

We loved this coat and wish that we had been born rich so that we might have taken it away before some lucky person sees it for it is a perfect dream and we want to say one more thing about the hemline of another coat we saw and then we are through with hemlines This was a broadtail and had a shallow border which lengthens in four points.

Broadtail Smart

Black broadtail and gray broadtail put in a very bold appeaarnce this fall for they seem quite satisfied with themselves and from all we can gather, they will be very important furs. On some coats we saw adorable little ties of the fur at one side or at the side back. For the woman who is not slender the flat jabot collar is no doubt designed. It is particularly flattering in a fur such as caracul, broadtail or ermine.

No End of Collars

There seems to be no end to collars made of contrasting furs These furs are combined in narrow borders or with fitted intersections of the coat fur and collars For instance, beige ermine trimmed a brown Alaska seal. There is something very satisfactory and chic as well about the coat entirely of one fur.

A Russian Fitch Coat

One particularly smart coat of this type is of natural Russian fitch. The skins were beautifully worked together in a manner which created a narrow border of deep brown about the hem. Other coats of one fur that are always nice and always in fashion are black caracul, leopard and leopard cat, muskrat Persian lamb, raccoon of course and Hudson seal.

News of Sports Furs

Sports furs are expected to receive no end of popularity for their intelligent combination of furs and of colors achieving a smart variety yet retaining a slender silhouette. We noticed geometric motifs, diagonals and pointed lines in decorative patterns. We noticed too in the sport furs that the severity of the boyish fashions is noticeable by its absence. The coats are softly feminine.

Furs may come and furs may go but the luxurious ermine goes on forever holding the very highest place in fur fashions for evening We saw some perfectly breath-taking wraps of wide beige and summer ermine, sometimes alone and again richly elaborated with foxes and sables.

The variety of silhouettes of these beautiful evening wraps is a very interesting one. Three-quarter length or the elegant sweeping fashion of hemlines lengthened at the back almost touching the heels are two important styles.

If you are anything like we are you will find it difficult to keep from buying several coats if for no other reason than for their lovely linings for there is an individuality of design and elaborate detail that we have never seen before at any time or any place.

Gorgeous Linings

Heavy flat crepe is often combined with transparent velvet in softly blended colors and appliques of rich coloring trim black satin linings. The decorative motifs being for the most part of transparent velvet. There are many gorgeously employed designs combined with appliques forming some very elaborate linings and yet they are not too elaborate to be in very excellent taste.

And so when you set about on your hunt for a new fur coat for the new season, we are sure you will enjoy yourselves just as we did and we hope that our resume here will help you in selecting your new coat.

EXPECT 16,000 TO MIGRATE FOR GAME

COLUMBUS, Oct. 17.— More than 16,000 Ohioans are scheduled to leave the home state tomorrow and Saturday to witness the annual Ohio State-Michigan football classic which has come to be regarded as a tradition by the two universities.

This year Ohio State beards the Wolverine in its den at Ann Arbor, Saturday, Oct. 19.

The impending tussle is the twenty-sixth between the two schools and the twelfth since Ohio State entered the Big Ten. Not counting 1918, which was an unofficial year, Michigan has won six games to State's four.

All seats for the game have been reported sold for some days and the annual capacity crowd is expected.

Baby ills and ailments seem twice as serious at night. A sudden cry may mean colic. Or a sudden attack of diarrhea—a condition it is always important to check quickly. How would you meet this emergency—tonight? Have you a bottle of Castoria ready? There is nothing that can take the place of this harmless but effective remedy for children; nothing that acts quite the same, or has quite the same comforting effect on them.

For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old, reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an everyday aid. Its gentle influence will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. Its mild regulation will help an older child whose tongue is coated because of sluggish bowels. All druggists have Castoria; the genuine bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper.

AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

Never again need scientific research grope in darkened cellars behind doors bolted against torture. AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE has swept before it the ignorant barrier which stupidly impeded men of genius and science marches proudly on.

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

No Throat Irritation—No Cough.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

ILLINOIS CONGRESSWOMAN TO TRY AND ELIMINATE DENEEN

By F. J. CIPRIANI
Central Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Two's a crowd when it comes to getting a job constitutionally meant for one, and from now on the task of shoving Charles S. Deneen off his senatorial seat belongs mainly to Ruth Hanna McCormick.

And if anybody can jostle that suave ex-governor of Illinois from his Washington perch, it is this daughter of an illustrious Ohioan, the famed "maker of presidents." She has the indelible mark of Hanna in her blood. Senatorial life has been hers since the hey-day of the late Senator Mark Hanna, and was ended only with the defeat in 1924 of her husband, the late Senator Medill McCormick.

The Illinois office is available only to one. Congresswoman McCormick wants it, so does Senator Deneen, and one or the other, not forgetting several more aspirants, must be eliminated. Thus it is that two's too many, and Mrs. McCormick doesn't propose to be crowded.

She announced her candidacy for the Republican nomination against Deneen the other night, and at the same time declared her campaign would be "bunkless." Nor does she intend to make a "frill and frock" appeal to her sex. She insists her political fight is not a feminist movement. Mrs. McCormick undoubtedly will be a most formidable foe for the senatorial incumbent despite the sentiment in southern Illinois which is expressed in the provincial words of a downstater thusly; "We won't vote fer no skirt."

Mrs. McCormick is a vote getter and received 1,711,651 votes in her successful bid for congressman-at-large last year. This remarkable showing has not been overlooked by Senator Deneen or Lieut. Governor Fred E. Sterling and former Attorney General Leonard J. Brundage, the latter two a pair of potential candidates.

Illinois is keenly interested in Mrs. McCormick's efforts, and it would not be strange if this state, which has produced everything from Herrin riots to Abraham Lincoln, should send a woman to the senatorial halls of congress.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

ANNOUNCING THE PRINCE OF PEACE— And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.—Luke 2:13, 14.

THE MISSISSIPPI MUDDLE

The Mississippi flood control program enacted by congress sixteen months ago has met with so much opposition from its beneficiaries that Mr. Hoover has suggested the suspension of activities in the lower flood zones pending a resurvey of the control problem. At least one of its several floodway projects is tied up in federal courts. Another is threatened with court action if it is not modified to suit the affected communities. A third has caused much local grumbling. The farmers of a fourth flood basin want to know why the army plan overlooked them and are ready to march on Washington to find out. About all the Jones-Reid control bill has accomplished to date is to create opposition among the very people it was intended to help.

All this might have been expected, when congress surrendered to the flood states and substituted the Jones-Reid bill for the administration flood control bill. The engineering features of the two measures were not dissimilar. They were based on the so-called "Jadwin plan." The vital difference between the two bills lay in the elimination by the Jones-Reid bill of the principle of local contribution by affected communities, which the administration bill featured. The argument by which Mr. Coolidge supported the application of this principle to flood control was that it was "extremely important" that those requesting improvements should be charged with some responsibility for their cost and "the neighborhood where works are constructed (should) have a pecuniary interest in preventing waste and extravagance and securing a wise and economical expenditure of public funds." The Jones-Reid bill threw virtually the entire responsibilty and cost on the federal government, whose income is obtained largely from states unaffected by the proposed flood control works. When the bill reached Mr. Coolidge he is said to have signed it "without comment."

The neighborhoods where the works are to be constructed, which no longer have a pecuniary interest in economy, are running true to form, as doubtless Mr. Coolidge, who understands human nature, was confident they would. They are demanding that the control plan be modified to suit their local needs or whims, whatever the cost, which in any event they will not have to meet. Among these protestants doubtless are many honest men. A lot of them, however, admittedly are "gougers," who saw the national treasury successfully raided sixteen months ago and are now hoping to hold it up on their own account. The principle of sole federal responsibility for flood control in any part of the country is vicious; and the implementation of it is the Mississippi valley will become not only vicious, but tremendously expensive if the manner in which national appropriations shall be expended is to be dictated by localities which have no interest in seeing that they are wisely employed.

The Jadwin plan may not be perfect; but it is rather strange that Mr. Hoover, who presumably was as competent an engineer when he, at least inferentially, approved it sixteen months ago, as he is today, should now suggest its suspension and a resurvey of the whole control problem. The first thing the surveyor should do is to run a straight line between politics and flood protection —and then stick to it.

WOMEN EXPERTS

The ever-fascinating dispatches reveal the fact that an Ohio woman, Mrs. Ray O. Myers, has taken up embalming. One learns she won the national amateur typing championhsip. A champion at one thing, she proposes to be a champion at another. The expert typist is to become the expert embalmer. Just some more evidence of the melancholy fact that man, as an expert, is fading out of the picture. Man's field of supremacy is down to garden plot size.

FOR FREEDOM AND FAIRNESS

Fair minded folks will agree with Senator Vanderberg of Michigan, in his law to keep a judge from acting as "judge, legislature, prosecutor and sheriff" when he alleges that a newspaper man or anybody else has been in contempt of court. No federal judge—no other judge for that matter—should pass on a case of contempt which originated in his own court. He has been elected or appointed to be a judge, not to be a prosecutor.

SHORT SIGHTED

Strange that the many who frequently find fault with the outspokenness of newspapers, and their daily habit of telling the facts, do not think seriously enough to realize that the very newspapers which sometimes offend them are the high and final barriers that stand between the rank and file of the people and leaders who may and do become powerful enough to oppress them.

Just how comfortable would you feel about a lot of city officials, county officials, state and national officials if there were no means of quick, easy and free publicity? The newspaper is the outstanding necessity of a democracy—especially of a democracy which keeps moving toward a more highly centralized authority.

TITLES

Small men need titles to lean against. The weak need titles to hold them up. The strong need no titles. Personality does not need a title. The third assistant to the second vice president, with personality, may run the place.

DANGEROUS

Beware of the man who keeps smiling, who doesn't lose his temper over trifles, who remains calm in the daily battle. He is likely to be dangerous. He is likely to be a very patient man. He is likely to "get you if you don't watch out."

ADDED APPROPRIATION FOR FIGHTING FOREST FIRES ASKED

Congressman from Washington

(John William Summers was born at Valeene, Ind., April 29, 1870. He is a graduate of Southern Indiana Normal college and the Kentucky School of Medicine. He did post graduate work at Louisville Medical college, New York and abroad. He began his medical practice at Mattoon, Ill. In 1908 he moved to Walla Walla, Wash., engaged in medical practice and as a wheat grower and orchardist. In 1917 he was a member of the Washington house of representatives. He was elected to congress in 1919 from the fourth Washington district and has been returned each term since. He is a Republican.)

During an inspection trip of 13 national forests in 10 of the western states and Alaska, just completed, a house sub-committee found that there is some difference of opinion of the future of the forests. Some timber company officials believe that by protecting the cut-over lands from the fire ravages, the seeds already deposited in the ground will reforest burned-over areas; others believe that it is more economical to replant, because they can restock the forest areas with high grade species of trees instead of by the hit-and-miss second growth of inferior quality. The sub-committee visited and studied replanted areas in several government reservations.

The big problem seems to oe the protection of the standing forests and young growth from forest fires. That means the need of a better system of firebreaks, the need of perfectly cleared areas a few yards wide, and the construction of trails for the firefighters. There is a need for funds for work along these lines.

There are still inaccessible areas in the valuable national forests, where it takes from two to four days for a firefighter to reach a forest fire after he discovers the smoke of it. The goal of the forest service of the department of agriculture is to get firefighters to the scene of a forest fire within two hours of its outbreak.

That goal will be reached. It means greater federal appropriations and expenditures for roads and trails and firebreaks in the great forests of the country. But it also means an enoromus economic saving in emergency .fire-fighting which this past season alone has run into more than $2,000,000 over and above the regular, normal expenses of this forest fire combat service.

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

A poet once called the eyes that, and it is very true that they, more than any feature of the face, reveal a woman's real self. There is nothing more charming than a pair of clear feminine eyes, which look straight out into the world—happy and unafraid. Unfortunately, however, inner happiness is not the only factor responsible for the beauty of the eyes.

A summer in the glaring rays of the sun will mevitably leave a trail of tiny crowsfeet around them, and give to the pupils a strained, unnatural expression. When the skin has taken on the deep hue of sun tan, the eyes usually lose some of their appearance of brilliancy by contrast. There is, of course, special eye care which ca neliminate all these problems.

First, there is the eye bath, a delightful and refreshing routine which will remove even the tiniest particle of dust and leave the eyes clear and bright. Nourishing cream, patted around the eyes where the crowsfeet are wont to form, will keep the skin soft, smooth and free from lines. Before going out into the sun you would do well to pat some protective foundation cream around your eyes before applying your powder. This is the ounce of prevention that is worth a pound of cure.

Of course, the correct make-up touches can enhance the charm of the eyes unbelieveably. An important thing to remember is to brush away any particles of powder which may cling to your lashes and brows. Then apply a little eyelash and eyebrow grower. This not only thimulates growth, but gives the eyes a distinctive, well-groomed appearance.

Most of you will find that the correct make-up, discretely applied, will help the eyes compete wit hthe exotic coloring of the skin which you have brought back from your favorite resort.

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — In any bad sense of the word, no lobbying whatever is done in Washington, according to the representatives of all the interests which keep legislative agencies of one sort or another on the job in the capital.

Every one of these outfits can give a perfectly satisfactory account of its activities—if not too embarrassingly questioned.

The personnel of Senator Caraway's lobby investigating committee is of a sort of threaten that the line of questioning WILL be embarrassing. Even a legislative agent whose conscience is pretty clear realizes that his work is liable to be presented in an unfavorable light

It is spoken of as the "Caraway committee" because the Arkansas senator introduced the resolution for the lobby probe and is chairman of the inquisitorial body. In a way, it might be called Senator Norris' committee; the Nebraskan appointed it. It is generally agreed that he appointed a corker.

It happened thus:

The Caraway resolution had been hanging fire for about a year—pooh-hooed by the senate element which considers any sort of an investigation a pest—when the Shearer inquiry broke unexpectedly and unavoidably, and gave the subject of lobbying such a fillip that the Arkansan managed to get action on his proposition before the hush-hush folk had time to stop him

In a final effort to smother the thing, the hush-hushers did contrive to get the resolution referred to a committee, and there, if they had picked the right one, it would have slumbered, but by a fatal error, probably due to their hurry, they sent it to the judiciary committee, of which the violently unmanageable Senator Norris is chairman.

Grabbing his fountain pen, Norris instantly jotted down, as a subcommittee to tear lobbying wide open, the names of:

Borah?—ag'in everything and everybody.

Walsh? — the oil prober!—'nuff said.

Blaine—Most merciless of Wisconsin radicals.

Robinson?—to be sure, there would be a little balm in Gilead in Robinson, if there were about four more of him. Robinson is regular enough. But what price one lone Daniel in the den of lions?

That much is considered by everyone.

But they do say there are plenty of new kinds.

For instance, there is a lot of talk of the "social lobby"—which, so it's gossipped, will take up a promising young member of one of the two houses of congress, and his ambitious frau and their debutante daughters, if they have any, and speedily make "somebodies" of them in the most exclusive circles, provided the office-holder of the family responds approximately to his name when the roll is called in his branch of the national legislature.

It also is often worth a politician's while to have his recommendations heeded when appointments are to be made in his home bailiwick.

For that matter, it is nice for him to feel that he probably can count on a snug appointive berth for himself, in case he meets with a reverse at the polls one of these days.

The mere consciousness of influence in high quarters — available whenever it may be required—is comfortable.

Or whose business is it if a fat job in private life is offered to an old political war horse?—when, in the fulness of time, he retires from the public service.

And do lobbyists (if there are any) deal in such commodities?

It is exactly to see if any answer can be found to that query that Senator Caraway was so anxious to have his investigatorial resolution adopted.

Still, if Senator Caraway's subcommittee succeeds in prying the lid off, who knows what they may find underneath it?

DINNER
Veal with Lima Beans
Cabbage Salad
Stuffed Pears or Sliced Peaches with Rice Pudding

Cooked peaches or other fruit may be used in place of the fresh peaches with the rice pudding. The menu would serve four.

Today's Recipes

Veal with Lima Beans—Buy one and one-half pounds of veal for roasting and have the butcher chop it into very small pieces, less than an inch in size. Melt two tablespoons butter in an iron skillet, add one-half cup of chopped onion and one stalk of celery. Fry until brown, taking care not to burn. Then add the veal and fry it till nice and brown. Put into mixture two cups of raw sliced tomatoes and stir till the tomatoes begin to get soft. Season to taste and barely cover with hot water. Then add three-fourths pound fresh lima beans. If your skillet is large enough to hold the entire mixture, it makes an ideal roaster. But if it is too small transfer the mixture to a roaster and cook in an oven 275 degrees for three hours. This is nice baked and served in a glass casserole.

Stuffed Pears—Pare and core large pears and stuff with seeded dates and shredded cocanut. Place together in a glass baking dish, cover bottom of pan with water and bake one hour with oven regulator at 275 degrees.

Sliced Peaches With Rice Pudding—Make regular pudding in baking dish. Serve in dessert dishes, warm and slice peaches over the rice, pouring top milk over all.

Small Egg Beater

A small 10 cent egg beater with bowl and cover, such as is sold for children, can be used for making thickening for gravies or custards, beating egg yolks, whipping small amounts of cream and various other household uses.

Waxed Ticking.

A young housekeeper writes: In remaking a pair of feather bed pillows I purchased a good heavy piece of feather-proof pillow ticking. An experienced housekeeper told me before making this up I should rub the wrong side well with a piece of beeswax, which will keep the small feathers from coming through.

BUTTERSCOTCH TARTS—One cup brown sugar, one tablespoon butter, two tablespoons water, one cup milk, two tablespoons cornstarch, one egg, one-half teaspoon vanilla, four tablespoons confectioner's sugar. Heat sugar, butter and water together until sugar is dissolved. Mix milk, cornstarch and beaten egg yolk and add to sugar mixture; cook over hot water until thick, cool and add vanilla, pour into baked tart shells and cover with meringue made of beaten egg white and confectioner's sugar and brown in hot oven.

Diet and Health

Have a Physical Examination Before Using Mechanical Exercises

Miss J.—There have been reports in the medical literature recently of harmful effects caused by the indiscriminate use of the vibratory machines you ask about. One case was that of a man who had symptoms of intestional trouble which was exaggerated exceedingly; and another case of a man who had inflamation of the bladder so that a hemorrhage was caused. So it is wise to have a physical checkup to be sure there are no disturbances which will be made worse by the active vibration the machines give, before you use one. They are undoubtedly beneficial—if there is no reason you should not use them—especially if you are of sedentary habits and do not get time for enough vigorous exercise and walking in the open, for the vibrations give a good massage, with a general stimulation of the muscles and circulation. I feel that I get benefit from the one I have.

While these vibratory machines undoubtedly help to reduce the measurements by causing some of the superficial fat to break down, they will not reduce the weight. You have to limit your calories in order to reduce; in other words, you have to go on a scientific reducing diet. The paradox is explained by the fact that at the same time of the lessening of the fat tissue, there is also a development and increase in the muscle tissue. However, an equal weight of muscle tissue does not take up so much space as fat tissue. Of course, this development of the muscle tissue and the lessening of the fat are desirable.

We have a pamphlet on Reducing and Gaining and an article outlining some splendid trunk exercises called the Tummy Ten. You may have these by following the column rules.

Warts and Moles

Mrs. C.—I wouldn't advise any patent medication for the removal of moles, or any home treatment of them. I judge from the description of the advertised product you sent me, of "a syrupy substance of the color and consistency of honey," that it is probably collodion with 5 per cent or so of salicylic acid in it. This is one of the standard remedies for warts and corns. Simple collodion, as well as many other antiseptic substances, will also remove simple warts, if painted daily for some time. Perhaps the collodion has a double action in that it cuts off a little of the blood supply and makes the outer layer die and finally wears it down. But for moles or any but the simple warts, it is best to go to a dermatologist for treatment.

"Dear Doctor: I believe you are right in thinking that habitually unshaved faces are a cause of divorce. But a painted woman is sure as disgusting to a normal man as a be-whiskered man to a normal woman! It is enough to make a man want a divorce to have to go out with a woman whose face is all dirtied up with powder like a clown in a circus. Why can't a lovely lady wash her face and leave it clean? Even though her complexion is not famous, she looks a darn sight nicer with a clean face than with a lot of dirty paint smeared all over. She puts it on in a dark bedroom, thinking it improves her, but out in the light of day—mein Gott! what a clown a man's wife becomes! What can I do about it?

DISGUSTED HUSBAND."

To the one woman who is inartistic in taking the shine off her nose and adding a youthful bloom to her cheeks, D. H., I think there are 999 men who do not realize the importance of their daily shave. For your problem, I suggest you move, if possible, and get a light, airy bedroom (more hygienic, anyway), and also purchase your wife one of these magnifying, hand mirrors and ask her to inspect herself closely in the light before she sallies forth. you cannot blame women for wanting to look their best, and prettiest, for that's the way your sex likes 'em.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

What chance happiness when the girl you love lies to you before marriage?

Most of us lie more or less, of course. We say we are glad to see people when we are not. We lie in a host of other little ways, but a person who habitually deceives another, whose word one cannot rely on, is most uncomfortable to live with. Even when such a one tells the truth we are forced to doubt them. And this doubt will wreck the happiest partnership.

BLUE: In the first place, the girl is too young to consider marriage. She should wait at least two years, better four.

In the second place a girl who would deceive you now would not be very likely to make you happy. You would grow to doubt her even when she was telling the truth. It's unfortunate that you love her and that she knows that she can make you give in when she cries. That won't last forever. You'll soon grow tired of her tears, and they won't move you. You can't expect happiness on that basis. I think it would be much better if you broke with her now.

"Dear Virginia Lee: Could you please answer these questions: I am invited to a shower for a wedding. What do you think would be appropriate to take, and should I put on it who it is from? How should I congratulate her? My daughter has frequent sore throat. Do you know of any simple remedy that would cure it? MRS. F."

Linen towel, bath towel or set of towel and wash cloth, lunch cloth, lunch napkins, small pieces of china or glass, small pieces of silver or pewter, pottery, small lamps bath mat and rugs, etc. Have it wrapped as a gift at the store or wrap it yourself in tissue paper tied with ribbon and put a pretty card with your name on it and "best wishes," or "congratulations" on it.

Just tell the bride that you hope she will be very happy. If you know the groom, say something nice about him. Your daughter should go to a doctor. It may be her tonsils are infected and should be removed.

BUCKY: If I address a letter to you at your home with "Bucky" on the envelope, it would be sure to be opened by the wrong person, dear, so I think it better to answer you through the column.

I am very sorry for you in your trouble and think you are admirable when you try to excuse your mother's behavior on the ground of nervousness and old country ideas. They probably do account for many of her actions. Old-fashioned parents take the attitude that their children are their property and must do as they say, no matter how erratic their actions and words.

Try to control yourself, and to be as respectful as you can, although I certainly do not blame you for standing up for yourself when untrue stories are told about you.

Fighting and quarreling are degrading and should be avoided as much as possible, but I understand that is hard with a person who is so unreasonable.

Of course if you are actually abused you could take the matter to the children's court and they would talk to your mother and take you away from her if they thought it necessary. But I presume you would not want it to go that far.

You have only one more year of high school, and I want you to finish. Then, if you are not planning to go to college, you will doubtless get a job and be independent. If you cannot live happily at home, then leave and make your own way.

Judging from your letter, I would say you are an unusually bright and fair-minded girl, and your writing is good. Your English and grammar are also above the average, so I am sure you will overcome your handicap at home and grow into a sweet, broad-minded woman.

Peter's Adventures

THE CRADLE IN THE MULBERRY TREE

"Oh, dear!" said Peter to Sir Butterfly, "I certainly insulted Death's Head's Caterpillar without meaning to. I hope the fellow will not take a real dislike to me. He looks sort of dangerous and he must be at least four inches long and as thick as a man's finger. Will he bite, do you think?"

"No, indeed he won't," said Butterfly. "He is not really angry, only a little bit injured in his pride and he will soon forget all about it. Don't notice him at all."

"When I have grown nice and fat I shall know that it is high time to hide in the moist earth. I'll spin a cocoon that some say reminds them of a sea shell, and there I'll spend my pupa days. Then I, too, shall burst out as a gorgeous flier and upon myback I'll bear a skull that is the coat of arms of my particular branch of the family."

"Very good," declared General Hawk-Moth, "and now, after the Honorable Mrs. Bombyx has told how the eggs are laid, her 'beginning' will complete the story of spinning a cocoon. Only we must all fly over to the mulberry tree for that is where the silk worms always sleep the best."

Without more ado and in great excitement all the scalewings flew toward the mulberry tree. Even Sir Butterfly, in his evident anxiety to miss nothing, forgot all about Peter, who ran after them as quickly as he could. But the mulberry tree was quite a distance away, and when the boy reached it and edged his way through the crowd the Bombyx caterpillar had finished whatever he had to say and was spinning hundreds of yards of fine silk thread, wagging her head from side to side in great pain. The boy thought at first she must be. But as none of the moths paid the least bit of attention to it, Peter concluded that the motion she made was only part of the spinning, and he was quite right.

At last, having spun a great quantity of silk, the caterpillar wrapped itself tightly up in it, leaving her head until the last (its spinner was in its head), and it was from the spinner that oozed the sticky, yellow stuff that became soft silk.

"There," exclaimed General Hawk-Moth, when the head was at last covered, "friend Silkworm will sleep in her silken cradle until the day comes for her to wake as a moth like the Honorable Mrs. Bombyx!"

Merchants Close Stores For Game Friday

FRAMED by Phil

If information divulged by an ardent Ohio State University alumnus and attributed to Dr. John W. Wilce, former Ohio State football coach, represents the actual status of things, there is an explanation of why championship teams are seldom produced at State.

You have often heard the question asked, "Why does not State develop teams on a par with other Western Conference schools with such a large student body to draw from and the large number of candidates available every season?"

The answer is possibly contained in a story told by Dr. Wilce a few years ago during a visit to Xenia after he delivered a talk here.

Dr. Wilce disclosed that on the occasion of the annual meeting of the coaches of each of the Big Ten schools at Chicago five or more years ago, the ten coaches, representing Ohio State, Illinois, Michigan, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Indiana, Purdue, Northwestern and Chicago, held a secret meeting from which all outsiders were excluded.

One coach arose and expressed the wish that some method be arrived at whereby it could be determined the ranking of each of the conference schools with respect to the quality of the football material available for the coaches over a period of the last ten years.

In other words, the coaches desired to ascertain which of the schools had had the best material to work with in the development of football teams.

A vote was taken among the ten mentors and the result was surprising. The coaches voted unanimously that Iowa had been blessed with by far the most talented players with which to build up football teams. Illinois and Michigan tied for second place with Minnesota fourth.

Ohio State ranked seventh. Despite the fact the quality of its football material has been below that of six other Big Ten schools, no State eleven, if memory serves correctly, has ever finished that low in the conference standing and a number of championship or near-championship teams have been developed.

However, the coaches did not go a step further, it appears, and seek to find out why the material of one school should be better than that of another, which is to be regretted since this would be another phase of the question interesting to investigate.

In any event the story has its points and it is small wonder that the caliber of Ohio State elevens is not always up to the expectation of the "Downtown Coaches" of the school.

While on the subject, the resignation of Dr. Wilce as head football coach at Ohio State was a feature of the last Western Conference season which caused no little concern in the Big Ten. For a number of years Dr. Wilce has been recognized as one of the leading teachers of football in the country.

His teams had always been well schooled in all departments of play. Previous to his advent at Ohio State, the Buckeyes were not looked upon as a team of strength. After Dr. Wilce took the helm, championship teams were often developed and the huge stadium at Columbus became a reality.

Dr. Wilce did a great deal for Ohio State football and the game in the conference. With all due respect to his successor, Sam Willaman, his loss will be felt keenly at Columbus and the Big Ten lost a man who had always stood for the highest ideals in football.

Observers who have seen the 1929 Buckeyes in action this season are of the unanimous opinion that the Ohio State team has a great defense, but, according to one alumnus at least, the backfield is the weakest in the last ten years. The material is simply missing. True, Ohio State scored a surprising victory over the highly-touted Iowa eleven last Saturday, but State admittedly received most of the so-called breaks that were passed out, a factor that detracts somewhat from the win.

Fighting mad and showing new life in practice, Xenia Central High School's football squad is determined to make an improved showing Friday afternoon at Cox Field in the game with Withrow High School's crack Cincinnati eleven, which to all intents and purposes should prove the most attractive contest of the season.

Friday is to be observed as "Equipment Day," all of the proceeds of the game after deducting expenses, being used to purchase new equipment for Buccaneer athletic teams for next year.

Indications are that probably the largest crowd of the season will be on hand and the Bucs will not lack for vocal support from the sidelines.

The estimated huge attendance at the game is based on the fact that twenty-seven Xenia business firms have agreed to close their places of business from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. Friday, thereby giving employes an opportunity to witness the game.

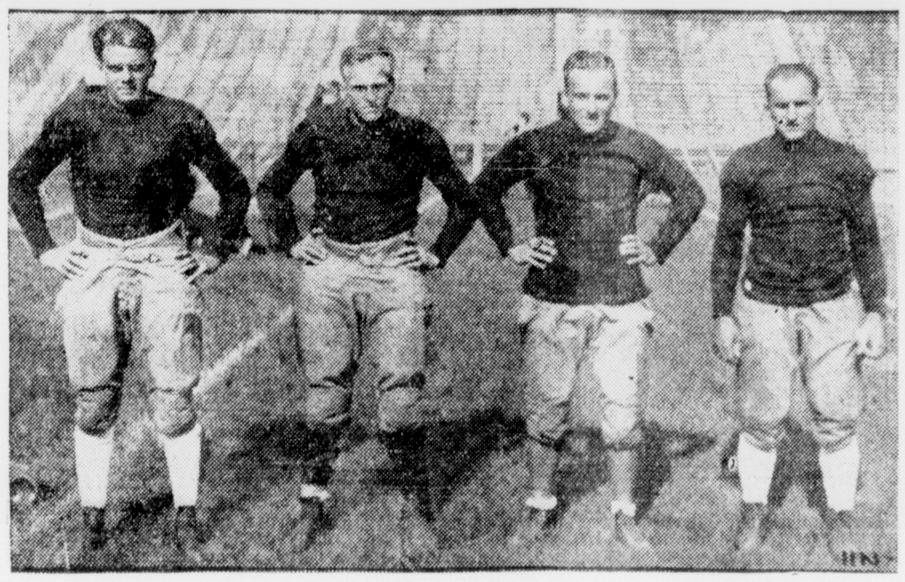

Coach Wilson has got his squad into a fighting humor but Xenia's showing will depend to a large extent on the physical condition of a number of regulars.

Much of the responsibility will rest on Xenia's two letter men, Fullback Joe Smittle and Quarterback Birch Bell. Both have been hampered by injuries this season, but Smittle by his play so far this season, has given ample indication that he can rip up a line for plenty of yardage when he is right. He also backs up the line and does about anything you can ask for a back to do.

Bell passes well but his greatest assets are speed and shiftiness. His absence from the Buccaneer lineup for two weeks was due to a cracked collar bone, but he will be ready to go against the Tigers.

A list of Xenia merchants who have signed a petition agreeing to close their stores from 2:30 to 4:30 during Friday's game follows: The R. D. Adair Co., Hutchison and Gibney Co., The Hy-Art Shop, Direct Furniture Co., Miller Electric Galloway and Cherry, John North, H. E. Eichman, W. J. Kennedy, Dunkel's Grocery, M. O. Abramowitz, Coates' Barber Shop, L. A. Wagner, The Criterion, Melvin Johnson Barber Shop, Valet Press Shop, Xenia Auto Necessity Co., Lula Faye Dining Room, Styles Shoe Store, Burgin Bankrupt Store, Jobe Bros., C. A. Weaver Co., J. C. Penney Co., J. Thorb Charters, E. B. Curtis, L. S. Barnes and John A. Wood Barber Shop.

Poems that Live

NO FAULT IN WOMEN

NO fault in women to refuse
The offer which they most would choose:
No fault in women to confess
How tedious they are in their dress:
No fault in women to lay on
The tincture of vermilion,
And there to give the cheek a dye
Of white, where Nature doth deny:
No fault in women to make show
Of largeness, when they've nothing so;
When, true it is, the outside swells
With inward buckram, little else:
No fault in women, though they be
But seldom from suspicion free:
No fault in womankind at all,

SHOE FACTORY BUYS SITE FOR OFFICES

With the purchase from John T. Harbine, Jr., of property situated on Leaman St., directly east of the company's plant, the offices of The Krippendorf-Ditmann Co., formerly the Xenia Shoe Manufacturing Co., may be transferred to the new location within the next month to make room for contemplated factory expansion, it is announced.

The newly acquired property includes a tract with a frontage of forty feet. A small house on the site is expected to be remodeled and fitted up for occupancy for office purposes.

May Succeed Huggins

Reports are current that "Eddie" Collins, former star of the Philadelphia Athletics, will be selected to manage the New York Yankees, filling the vacancy caused by the death of Miller Huggins.

Will Transmit Driving Power by Radio

George Peabody Converse, husband of Anita Stewart, motion picture star, is perfecting a mechanism which by means of radio will transmit electric energy from the place of its generation to other spots hundreds of miles away. It will be possible, he declares, to operate airplanes, steamships, railroad trains and automobiles from distant points of control. And more, he declared, when perfection has been attained, the instrument will be able to gather electric energy from the atmosphere and harness to the vehicle to be motivated. His invention, he says, ultimately will do away with the internal combustion engine and the use of gasoline in automobiles.

Royal Pair Take to the Air

Two courageous French women and 17 hardy sailors, survivors of the auxiliary schooner Bretagne, which foundered off the Washington coast so quickly that her radio operator could not send out S. O. S. calls, are pictured here after their return to safety. After tossing in a lifeboat for 21 hours, in mountainous seas, they drifted across the path of the lumber schooner, Whitney Olson, which took them to Los Angeles. Capt. PLAN LARGEST OBSERVATORY FOR CALIFORNIA PEAK

Within a few months, what is said to be the greatest astronomical observatory in the world will be constructed on a southern California mountain, within a 200-mile radius of Pasadena. More than $20,000,000 will be expended to complete and equip the observatory by the Carnegie Institute. Nightly, Major P. H. McLaughlin, in charge, makes observations of the solar system to determine how many nights in the year are clear enough to study the heavens. Construction of a 200-inch reflector is under way. San Bernardino, Big Bear and Baldy Peaks and Mt. Volcan have been scenes of trial observations and the observatory probably will be constructed at one of these places. Above, Major McLaughlin is looking through the telescope he is using to make his observations.

DAMAGE SUITS ARE DISMISSED AFTER SETTLEMENT MADE

A compromise for an unannounced consideration having been effected, three suits demanding damages aggregating $6,529.25, which have been pending against Police Chief Ben South, Wilmington, since December 22, 1928, have been ordered dismissed in Common Pleas Court.

The actions recall an auto collision on the Dayton Pike, November 21, 1928, Mary O. Watson, Xenia, colored, plaintiff in a suit for $5,088.75 damages, alleged personal injuries sustained in the accident while riding in a car with her son, H. O. Watson, who filed a separate personal injury suit for $1,011.50. The third suit for $500 was filed by Mrs. Watson, as administratrix of the estate of W. E. Watson, deceased, on the grounds the car which was wrecked belonged to the estate.

The World And All

NO ACCOUNTING FOR TASTES

A business of gigantic proportions has been built up by the unknown [illegible] tend to every part of the United States.

One of the most assiduous collectors of erotica, as the suppressed books on unmentionable subjects are called, is an oil millionaire of a small town in Oklahoma. This man has a vault in his home for the preservation of the expensive "treasurers" that he has collected from the corners of the earth. He has thousands of volumes on his shelves, not one of which could be legally sent through the mails or legally imported into this country.

What a party John S. Summer would have in that Oklahoma library!

There is a handsome profit in that have high rents to pay depend upon under-the-counter trade for their profits.

Some of the bookleggers go abroad for their supplies. Many forbidden books are printed in France in the English language, by expatriated Americans, for the American trade. These books are smuggled in, as they would be confiscated by the customs in the ordinary course of inspection.

There are also printers who specialize in this trade. Some of these are regular journeymen printers who have saved their money, bought equipment for a small shop, and gone into money-making. They set their own type and do their own presswork in one-man shops, or in some instances in two-man shops.

Type is set for a forbidden book, a thousand copies are printed and bound, and then the shop is closed up while the proprietor or proprietors go out with their brief cases, peddling their wares on a round of well-known points of distribution. A thousand of these books, cheaply printed, will bring the printers five thousand dollars, and will be sold to collectors of such stuff for twenty-five thousand dollars or more.

Restricts Liberty Professor Finds

RUSSIA as a land of striking contrasts, where at the same time the traveler finds remarkable systems of transportation, production, and education side by side with the strictest limitations on personal liberty, was portrayed by Professor Rudolph Broda, associate professor of social sciences at Antioch, in an interview at the college.

"I was greatly pleased to verify some of the rumors I had heard about improved industrial and business condition under the Soviet," he said. "But much chagrined to find also true some of the darker reports about conditions in the field of personal and political liberty, and the relations existing between the various classes."

On the "bright" side, Professor Broda noted what he said was conclusive evidence that production, both industrial and agricultural, has increased in Russia under the Soviet regime to a point far beyond anything experienced before the war. He also credited the Russians with having developed an efficient system of communications equalling or excelling anything in western Europe, a remarkable state program for the improvement of public health, and an improved educational system which based admission to the secondary schools and colleges on the results of competitive examinations.

But liberty in the sense of the freedom of speech, and the press, Professor Broda found to be dead. In the church, the professor declared, the clergy have the right to conduct services as they please, but they cannot include any sort of religious discussion.

Freedom of discussion, he said, is to be found only within the ranks of the Communist party, in the council meetings. There discussion and expression of opinion is permitted,—but once the Communist party has voted on a course of action, discussion is at an end and unswerving obedience is all that is accepted.

This oppression of civil liberties Professor Broda declared to be based on the desire of the scarcely more than 1,000,000 members of the Communist party to control Russian political affairs. For those outside the party there is no political liberty.

Professor Broda pointed out that he had convinced himself that the idea of "equality" is not a reality in Soviet Russia. There are distinctions between individuals based on their skill and ability. Thus the captain and mates of the vessel which took Professor Broda and his party to Russia from London received different rates of pay. One notable feature however was that they all, irrespective of rank, received some share in the profits of the voyage. During the trip they held a number of meetings for the discussion of events of interest in Russia, and at one meeting Professor Broda reported hearing members of the crew speak at length on the subject of electrification of the region around Leningrad. All workers, he said, especially the 9,000,000 members of the trades unions and the members of the Communist party, are intensely interested in the development and success of the Soviet program.

Although the management of 95 per cent of all industry and trade is in the hands of the state, and is conducted through "trusts" in which the state, various departments, and municipalities own all the interests, individual skill is repaid on the basis of managerial ability. Many of the industrial and business heads are not Communists, and they are paid on a profit sharing basis. Only those who belong to the Communist party, and who have sworn allegiance to the social principles of the party, are restricted in their earnings. Thus although the country is in the hands of the Communist party, a vast part of its industrial organization still recognizes the economic motive largely in its methods.

Professor Broda also indicated that there is still much class warfare between the wealthy peasant and the poor peasants. Although all the land is held by the state and is let out to the peasants, some of them by the possession of cattle and farming implements are much wealthier than the others. The Soviet government by organization of co-operative societies is striving to overcome this situation but has met with little success.

WARWICK TRIAL IS STARTED THURSDAY

Jury trial of Oliver Warwick, colored, Columbus Pike, on a charge of receiving stolen property, began in Common Pleas Court Thursday morning.

The chickens were recovered as they were allegedly being delivered to Warwick's home. Warwick denied the charge but was indicted by the October grand jury.

Informed motorists say, "Buy an EIGHT"

The informed demand today is unmistakably for the Eight. The swing of public preference is developing with unprecedented rapidity. Nobody can predict what chance a Six will have in next year's used car markets.

Consider the facts: During the first seven months of this year, in 43 states,* registrations of new cars over $1,000 showed a 94 per cent increase in Eights—and an 18 per cent decrease in Sixes. Every high-priced American car is an Eight. The finest models of such foreign aristocrats as Bugatti, Bianchi, DeDion-Bouton, Isotta-Fraschini, Mercedes-Benz and Renault are Eights. Today, over 41 per cent of all American makes of cars are Eights.

So why pay as much or more for a Six when you can have a champion Eight by Studebaker—holder of 11 world records and more American stock car records for speed and endurance than all other makes combined? A Studebaker Eight, brilliant with the power, the smoothness, the flexibility that only an Eight can deliver. An Eight as economical as the thriftiest Six. And styled with a notable smartness all the way through.

Remember what happened to the Fours in the medium and high priced fields. Sixes today are succumbing to Eights the same way. Now that it costs no more to own and drive one—get an Eight—a champion Studebaker Eight!

MUST PROTECT HENS FROM COLD WEATHER UNIVERSITY SAYS

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 17.— If hens lay during cold weather, they must be protected from extremely low temperatures. Therefore the plans for the standard Ohio Type poultry house which had been drawn and recommended by the Ohio State University, here through the past several years, have been modified to provide more warmth.

Specifications for the new Ohio Type house take into particular consideration the temperature conditions in the house.

The height of the house has been reduced considerably because the former standard unit was so high that it was cold now the heighth is just sufficient to enable a person to stand upright at the lowest point.

The specifications for the new type house call for double walls. The double walls are obtained by lining the inside of the boards with insulation material or by lining with boards and stuffing with shaving. The new type house makes it possible to maintain a temperature above freezing even in the coldest weather in Ohio. Poultrymen using insulated houses find that cold spells have little effect on their egg production.

Use of heat in insulated houses during extremely cold weather will materially aid in egg production because the hens, when the temperature is comfortably high will consume a normal amount of feed.

heating plants for Ohio poultry

Some of the most successful houses have been home made. The outstanding success in poultry house heating has been obtained by placing hot water pipes in the floor of the house, thereby heating the floor, and thus maintaining the dry litter as well as warming the house.

Complete instructions for the new Ohio Type house are contained in a recent bulletin on poultry houses written by H. P. Twitchell, specialist in agriculture engineering and R. E. Craig, poultry husbandry specialist for the university.

PROF. GIBBS WILL LECTURE ON BARRIE BEFORE BOOK CLUB

Prof. Lincoln Gibbs of Antioch College, Yellow Springs, will talk on "Sir James Barrie," at the first meeting of the year of the "Friends of Books Club," an organization sponsored by the Greene County Library for the benefit of those interested in the best books, old and new, Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, at the Library.

Prof. Gibbs, it is said, is a great admirer of Barrie and a splendid address is in view. He gave an interesting address at one of the meetings last year on "Eugene O'Neill."

The program committee expects to present an unusually attractive program for this year, although no definite announcements for the future meetings can be given. It may be of interest to many interested in these meetings, that the committee expects to devote one meeting to recent Scandinavian literature, one to modern humor and to bring a speaker from Dayton to discuss the new biographies.

The drama was chosen for the first meeting because of the interest Xenians are showing in the Little Theater Guild. With so much interest in the drama being shown a discussion of the plays of one of the most popular of modern dramatists will have a universal appeal.

The meetings are open to the public and all are invited to attend.

SCOUT MEETING

Troop No. 41, Boy Scouts of America, will have an inspection at its meeting Thursday evening, October 24 at 7:30 o'clock at the Scout cabin. All committeemen and registered Scouts of this troop are requested to be present as each troop in the district will be graded on attendance. The inspection will be followed by the serving of refreshments, according to Scoutmaster R. H. Kingsbury.

HIS OWN ROMANCY FOR COMING STORY

WOOSTER, O., Oct. 17.—Having selected the rural part of Wayne County as one section of the state little explored by literary men, Dr. S. F. Wood, the author of several novels, surprised himself by bringing one part of a romance with him when he came here to seek material for his facile pen.

The story will be included in a book which he plans to write soon, he said during an interview at his farm home, Cresthaven, six miles west of here.

Unostentatiously, a number of months ago, Dr. Wood purchased the farm of a Mrs. Lawrence in Chester Twp., the rambling old farmhouse and the wooded hills which appealed to his artistic taste.

Soon afterwards, he invited a friend, E. W. Vickers, a botanist of Mill Creek Park, Youngstown, to go on a week-end camping trip. The botanist's son, Prof. Lindley Vickers, made the third member of the party.

Dr. Wood selected a site in the forested area of the farm for their camp. He neglected to tell his guests that he owned the farm. The following day, he told his guests they had been invited to the farmhouse for the evening.

There they enjoyed a good old-fashioned evening at a typical country home. It was featured by home-made tasties and plenty of music, which was provided by Mrs. Lawrence's two daughters, Dorothy and Anna.

Vickers and his son returned to Youngstown. Dr. Woods remained on the farm and has been putting in many busy months transforming it to suit his fancy.

Among his projects, he has planned an orchard, which, in conjunction with the national forest area, creates an 'airplane" tree. The orchard looks like a huge airplane when viewed from the air. Several years of growth on the part of the fruit trees will be required to complete the spectacle.

But to return to the story of the romance! It was just three weeks after the camping trip that Miss Dorothy Lawrence received a note from young Vickers asking permission to call. Three months later, she was wearing a diamond engagement ring.

And in the doorway of the old-fashioned farmhouse recently where her mother and grandmother were wedded, Miss Dorothy became Mrs. Lindley Vickers. Prof. and Mrs. Vickers have taken up their residence on a suburban farm at Belle Center, Ohio.

The story of the romance, together with its background will be woven into a story which Dr. Woods plans to write soon.

Among Dr. Woods' books are "Blossoms from the Clay," and "Creston Meadows." Another novel, "The Blue and Gold," a yarn centering around life at Granville, Ohio, will appear soon.

The chief feminine character, he said, is a personal friend and Dr. Woods vouches, "she is a real million dollar prize for the man who can persuade her to marry."

NEW CURRENCY IS NOW BEING FORGED

WHEELING, W. Va., Oct. 17.—Small sized currency is no deterrent to forgers, Wheeling residents have discovered that some of the midget $5 papers they have received are just that—papers.

The discovery has led to the arrival of squads of investigators from the federal justice and treasury departments. It is believed that the spurious bills were circulated shortly after the new currency was issued in July.

"KONJOLA FREED ME FROM ALL MY HEALTH TROUBLES"

"One of the main causes of my suffering was the poor condition of my stomach," said Mrs. Hattie Mixer, R. F. D. No. 2, Ashtabula, Ohio. "Food did not agree with me, and gas formed on my stomach after every meal. I was subject to headaches and dizzy spells and was very restless. Then, too, I suffered from the poor condition of my kidneys.

"A friend recommended Konjola to me and I gave it a trial. How glad I am that I did! My stomach and kidney troubles have disappeared—vanished as if by magic. My nerves are as calm and strong as they ever were. I eat and sleep well, and wake up in the morning feeling rested and refreshed. Konjola surely worked wonders in my case and I never lose an opportunity to praise it".

INSECT IMMIGRANTS PROVE WORST ENEMIES

Insects introduced into the United States from foreign lands, according to J. S. Houser of the Department of Entomology of the Ohio Experiment Station, constitute our most serious insect offenders. Some of these have been established so long that we sometimes forget that they have not been present always. There are well over a hundred such pests in the United States and many of them are found in Ohio.

The Hessian fly, codling moth, San Jose scale, cabbage aphid, and rosy apple aphid, Mr. Houser says, will serve as examples of the older introductions, while the European corn borer, Oriental fruit moth, and Mexican bean beetle are prominent among the new comers.

Within recent years special efforts have been made to prevent the introduction of these foreign invaders, by plant importation regulations and inspection, but even under the most rigid precautions occasionally even now a new pest gains a foothold.

After an insect has been present for a long time there naturally develop a host of parasitic and predaceous enemies which operate against it and have a tendency to hold it in check. Mr. Houser cites the Colorado potato beetle as an example. Only occasionally does Nature strives to maintain a balance. When an insect is introduced into virgin territory it generally follows that its native controls are left behind, thus allowing it free opportunity to increase unchecked. Thus in its new home it may be many times more destructive than in its old.

The Oriental fruit moth is a notable exception of the newer introductions. Some of the imported native parasites were introduced into America with the pest itself and these are already making their presence felt.

The Federal Government is seeking out native controls for some of the other introduced pests, in the lands of their origin. These enemies or controls are being colonized in America. Substantial progress has been made in some instances, but at best the process is one which will require years to accomplish.

VEAL CALVES RETURN PROFIT OVER FEED COST

Veal calves returned $11.86 per head over the cost of their feed, as calculated by John F. Bowler, assistant in the department of rural economics of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, from records kept on twenty-three Putnam County, Ohio farms. This return was the compensation the farmer received to cover the cost of calf when dropped, his labor in feeding the calf, and any other expense.

The records were kept on 122 calves in the three years, 1926 to 1928, inclusive. The calves were kept an average of fifty days and consumed 130 gallons of whole milk and ten gallons of skimmilk during that period.

Most of the calves took the milk directly from the cow, only about one-fifth were bucket fed. One farmer fed a small quantity of meal in addition to whole milk.

The feed cost ranged from $10.74 to $19.83 per head and averaged twelve cents a gallon when fed from a bucket.

The weights at which the veals were sold varied from 130 to 250 pounds. The average weight was 185 pounds. The medium weight calves gave the largest margin above the cost of feed. The time spent in feeding and caring for the calves averaged ten minutes a day, or a little more than eight hours per head for the time the calves were on the farm.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

PLAYER WHEN NOT BUSY AT FOOTBALL

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 17.—Allen Holman, flashy young quarterback of Ohio State's gridiron squad, also plays polo, and girls, he does look swanky in the white polo togs.

On the polo field, Al displays himself to a great advantage. It's different in football, muchly so! In the latter sport, Al soon becomes besmeared with mud and sweat, and, anyhow, a football suit with its bulging pads and cumbersome headgear, doesn't make any man appear any too graceful. But in a polo outfit, with its smart breeches, wide belt and shiny boots, Al looks his best.

Holman's football ability—and he has plenty—has been so acclaimed that his prowress at polo has been almost totally eclipsed. The Iowa boy is just about the best polo player who ever matriculated at the Buckeye campus. He rides like a young Arab and he swings a wicked mallet. He's on the varsity squad and he is as much a threat on the turf as he is when handling the pigskin.

"Hockey on horseback," which is the way a humorist sometimes speaks of polo, was only recently declared a collegiate sport. There are three regulation fields south of the huge Ohio Stadium for practice and varsity competition. A stable of ninety ponies is at the disposal of the players.

Take it from Al, polo is a fast game. Perhaps it was astride the pony that the quarterback learned the dash and speed which promises to make him famous in the collegiate world as a football star.

Al is about five feet, ten inches tall and he tips the scales at 177 pounds, even after a stiff scrimmage. He's seen twenty-three summers.

According to other prominent campus figures at the university, Al is generally well liked. "He's nice," the co-eds say, and the men students vouch that "Al's Okay."

The Iowan has been meeting a lot of tough luck, lately. He was threatened for a time by the eligibility committee of the Big Ten, but after two hearings, the eligibility czars ruled that he could play.

And so Al donned his football togs and reported for practice. But, bad luck still dogged his heels. In a practice session, Holman suffered an ankle injury and it has kept him on the sidelines off and on.

Mrs. Mary Stewart (left) and her nineteen-year-old daughter, Bessie (right), asserted members of the "Great Eleven" religious cult now under investigation in Los Angeles, who were questioned by police regarding what they know about the activities of the cult. Mrs. Stewart, who is treasurer of the Order, declined to make any statement as to the cult's finances. She said that her title in the order was "Eleazar, who stands between the dead and the living." It was the first time that her daughter, Bessie, nineteen, whose title is "The Still Waters," had been called to tell what she knew of the cult's activities.

SHOULD START BULB PLANTS IN AUTUMN

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 17.—Bulb plants for next spring should be started now, according to the recommendation of Professor Alex Laurie of the floriculture department of the Ohio State University here.

In all cases it is better to start the bulbs in soil than start them in water, as it is sometimes done, Prof. Laurie asserts.

He suggests that the bulbs be placed in shallow flowerpots filled with a medium garden loam soil. The bulbs should be planted deeply in the soil and the dirt pressed loosely about them.

"A temperature of 40 to 50 degrees Farenheit is desirable", says Professor Laurie.

In spite of the quarantine on Dutch bulbs which has raised the price on bulbs generally, Professor Laurie still maintains that the price is small considering the pleasure derived from planting and raising them.

The first essential is to obtain good bulbs and these are not obtainable in the cheaper stores.

BOARD WILL MEET

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 17.—Ohio Board of Real Estate Examiners will meet in Cleveland October 22 and 23, in the offices of the Cleveland Real Estate Board, Union Trust Building, for consideration of complaints filed with the board from that section of the state. IMPORTANT FEATURE OF FASHION

The very first thing we noticed as we went fall fashion scouting the other day was the importance of the new silhouettes for fall. Relegated to fashions of a bygone day is the straight, box-like silhouette that the feminine world welcomed with open arms not very many seasons ago and now seems just as eager to give it up and toss it aside with the same easy nonchalance she does anything she has grown tired of.

The new fall collections are without any question of a doubt designed for the sophisticated woman. There is nothing especially youthful about them. Rather they are mature. And yet, they have about them a certain something that appealed to us and we are sure, will to you too. And that is a feeling of being cut on the lines of the human figure. They are molded as to waistline and then spread out to give greater flare in the skirt.

We enjoyed our trip through the stores and shops very much and are sure you will too. For there is a decidedly new trend in the fashions for Fall, 1929, that is very pleasing. There are the most complicated themes you could imagine and yet they are worked into the body of the costume in such a manner that they are delightfully informal and free.

Concerning Fall Coats

If you are in the market for a new coat this winter you will have all sorts of fun making your selection. For the coat departments in the city are fairly bulging with grand merchandise that is decidedly new, decidedly Parisian, and in our opinion for the materials and furs and the beautiful workmanship are not high priced.

Feminine Flares Appear

We are sure that you will like these fluttery feminine flares, if for no other reason than that they are so smartly new and so flattering to the feminine figure. We saw one adorable coat of a black material that was very soft to the touch and fashioned along the peplum idea and with a long subtly flared section dropped to the back to within 6 or 7 inches of the hemline. The coat was perfectly straight beneath. It seemed to us a perfect coat for afternoon functions and semi-formal evening affairs.

Straight Line Broken

When the coats are straight lined, fashion has devised various ways and means of making this type of coat especially interesting by breaking up the straight line. In some cases by shoulder or yoke treatments that give a loose feeling about the shoulder, and in others in tiered effects. Belts are placed at a high waistline too, in some of the more youthful coats and often finish at the left side with a ring buckle of silver or some composition in color to match the coat.

The uneven hemline so long a dark horse in the daytime coat fashions, has come to the fore in no uncertain manner. We saw so many coats with this uneven hemline treatments.

In some cases the coat would be straight all around except for a different left side and in other cases the coat would dip gradually to the center back. One of the very smartest coats we saw had a scalloped hemline and even in this coat we noticed it had a downward trend movement toward the back hemline.

There isn't a woman living that doesn't love fur in great quantities on her winter coat. For that reason we are sure you will enjoy slipping into the lovely models that are shown in the shops and stores throughout the town. Fur is one thing that the designers and manufacturers have not spared. It is used in tremendous quantity on straight lined coats in lovely shawl collars and bell cuffs and is often used as a finishing touch either all around the bottom of the coat or in certain important spots.

Most Favored Trimmings

For instance one of the most favored trimmings in a straight coat is an enormous collar of Hudson seal or caracul, which when dropped on the shoulders becomes a long fur cape collar. This coat will no doubt be gratefuly accepted in debutante and college girl circles.

Of the collar treatments, two types are particularly important. One is the collar of fabric with fur border which may be dropped flat placing the fur as a band about the shoulders. The other is cut high about the face with square collars and is usually fashioned of both flat and long haired furs. One interesting collar we chose was in Elizabethan shape with eggshell skunk on the inside and dark skunk on the outside.

Clever Sleeves

You will adore the sleeves on the new coats. Mostly because of the way in which fur is used on them. We saw flaring and close fitting cuffs, pouched styles and plain bands set just below the elbow. One coat had fur that reached from the wrist to the elbow. In the formal coat range Lida cloth is the outstanding fabric for fall with plenty of broadcloth and lots of novelty wool shown, especially a loosely woven basket fabric seems to have become a classic among fashionable women. Black, as usual, is the leading coat color, brown running a close second—beige and green next in line.

New Sport Coats

We had an awful time tearing ourselves away from the sport coat section because there is something so gloriously practical about them that in our estimation every woman feels much the same as we did. The most important feature about the new sport coats is the flaring movement. These flares do not appear in a bold and brazen manner but rather by deftly handled material evidently cut on the bias. Tweed, the old standby, still remains a favorite in the sports coat realm and is combined with all sorts of furs shown in various colors. The sales people in the shops place the importance on beige and brown, although they are of the opinion that green, red and blue will also be much favored by smart women.

Throughout the entire dress collections on exhibit in the shops, we noted a decided tendency toward the fitted silhouette. Skirts are showing for fall.

In general, the silhouette for fall evenings is a slender one with a sharply dipping back. We noticed many tube-like short frocks in the evening collection have extremely long panels attached by cartridge pleating at a point below the hips and back end panels are likewise set on the side of the skirt.

Some very smart details of evening frocks are large, self-fabric bows, flared tiers and flounces frequently adopted in a winding treatment, thus giving the much desired length. After an absence of many seasons panels seem to be welcomed back into the evening mode and are used mostly to give length and color contrast.

Before we go any further, we want to tell you that fashion has worked hand in hand with the colorings of Autumn and places them of first importance in the fall dress collections. There is the capucine orange, rust leaf browns, and warm reds, as well as an overwhelming supply of the ever popular and ever fashionable black.

Higher Waistline

Women with a slender waistline are very much in luck this season for there is a very definite trend toward the higher waistline which is often achieved in the new frocks by placing the belt in a normal position. Occasionally, belts are used only in sections across the front or the back of the frock. We tried on several frocks just so that we could get a better idea to give to you and so many of them noticed the higher necklines.

Models are arriving daily—they are last minute styles from Paris showing slender and much more shallow V necks than we have seen for many seasons. Even in the case of square and round necks we notice that fashion does not intend to leave much of the neck revealed this fall.

We did not, however, thank heavens, see any high collars like our grandmothers used to wear, but we did see neat buttoned up effects that reached just to the base of the neck. It is interesting to note too in dresses of this type that fashionable women are omitting jewelry and pearl chokers, that is, if they have necks they are not ashamed of.

News of Sleeves

The sleeves we saw for the most part were closely fitted to the wrist and were often finished with lace or georgette and were embroidered in nail-heads of silver and gold. Nailheads seem to be very popular trimming for dark silk dresses and bows and buttons are very much used also. A sin the coats the skirts of the dresses show no end to the irregular hemline and it is our guess that women all over the land are going to find a fresh relief in the slightly lengthened skirt line. We don't know what brought this new length in dresses about but Paris has been pounding away for a long time trying to make American women believe the longer skirt is the more becoming skirt and at last we seem to be agreeing.

Slender Evening Silhouette

You will simply adore the new evening frocks. Fashion is doing

VILLAGE NAMED FOR PROHIBITION ISSUE

BELLAIRE, O., Oct. 17.—The only known village in the county that has been named for the prohibition cause is Temperanceville, a hamlet on the western border of Somerset township.

Although prohibition did not become a law until 1918, this village, laid out in 1835, received its name because its founder Robert Gallagher, so abhorred use of intoxicating liquor that he thought he would make use of this principle in naming the new town to suit his belief.

You, too, may have a clear skin

THOUSANDS of people have weak, impure blood—to this may be attributed pimples, boils, eczema, "run-down" systems, rheumatism and even more serious ailments.

Without plenty of rich, red blood, there could be no strong, sturdy, powerful men, or beautiful, healthy women.

When you get the number of your red-blood-cells back to normal, that sluggish, let-down feeling, loss of appetite, those pains usually called rheumatism, boils, pimples and skin troubles disappear. You get hungry again and sleep soundly; firm flesh takes the place of that which was once flabby. You feel strong. Your nerves become steady. You are resistant to disease.

Throughout more than a hundred years S.S.S. has been a blessing to millions of people who have taken advantage of its wonderful medicinal properties. It is Nature's own blood tonic for improving the appetite, clearing

S.S.S. is made from fresh vegetable drugs and has a successful record of over 100 years back of it.

MOST FASCINATING BUYERS WILL FIND

It's a little difficult to tell you the story of the fabrics for fall because they are one of those things that must be seen and felt to be appreciated. To our way of thinking, there is no more fascinating place in any store than the fabric sections with bolt after bolt of fresh new merchandise displayed in such a fashion that no one could possibly resist buying material for one's attire wardrobe—even if you can't sew a stitch!

A Word About Silks

To begin with, we must tell you about the lovely silks for fall. Canton crepes, crepe satins and soft crepe failles are extremely important both in plain and printed patterns. They make such stunning frocks for practically every daytime occasion and evening as well. The plain colors that are especially high fashion for the new season are the lovely colors of autumn—rust browns, dull greens, in red and of course, there is no questioning the importance of black.

Printed Silks

In the printed silks, the Spanish influence fostered by the recent international exposition at Barcelona, is very much in evidence. One of the foremost silk manufacturers of the country has given us a brilliant collection of silks in designs of Spanish inspiration and called them "Barcelona Prints." They appear on crepe and are especially attractive for fall and winter wardrobes.

Wool Effects

The important patterns in crepe de chines and flat crepes simulate wool effects, including many de signs that look for all the world like tweed until you feel them. Then there are others in plaids, checks, diagonal effects, stripes and effective border treatments. The effect of woolen patterns is achieved by skillfully combining the colors. It is our humble opinion that these tweed patterned silks will make very successful frocks and ensembles for school and college wear as they are more comfortable for class-room wear and yet have that practical look about them so beloved by the future debutante. We think they would be particularly smart if they were fashioned exactly after the lines of some of the new tailored woolen frocks.

Fall Coatings

If you are one of those fortunate people who can attempt to make a coat—or who have a dressmaker you can trust implicitly, the new fall coatings will be of especial interest. Paris places a strong place to zibeline broadcloth. The stores are showing them in different weights and besides those that are perfectly plain and positively lovely, there are other weaves with an attractive wavy patterning or faint effect of stripes. Amazon broadcloths are also featured for coats.

Cashmere wool in a heavy curled effect that suggests astrakhan is another darling of the coat fabric family. It is shown in plain and in fancy versions, such as diagonals and chevrons. The plain ones have a silvery frosted effect.

Among other weaves of prominence for fall and winter coats are vigogne, soft cashmere weaves, wool velours and chinchilla. Sheer metal cloth comes to the fore very prominently again this season as one of the most popular mediums for elaborate evening costumes when combined with luxurious furs when used for wraps and generally lined with right velvet in contrasting shade.

Longer Dresses

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They help cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets.

Coat Lengths Rise Skirts Drop

By LUCY CLAIRE
Fashion Expert for Central Press

While we are intrigued watching the skirt lengths go down, it is quite as intriguing to note that coat lengths are going up. This is the natural outcome of cause and effect. As mentioned before in these articles, the lengthened skirt is responsible for the change in silhouette, and the shortened coat length is not an illusion created by the lengthened skirt, leaving the coat where it was before, but making it appear much shorter. It is an actual subtraction from the coat length as a solution of what to do about the long, irregular skirt line now in vogue for daytime wear.

Not that the long coat is out of fashion. The shorter coats have scarcely arrived as yet, except in jacket form and for evening wear, but many of the smart women seen at the Ritz and other smart places in New York have adopted the shorter coat for wear with the dipped in the back and other irregular skirt-lines.

The coats are perhaps a trifle shorter than the regulation three-quarter length as we have known it, and may be quite plain and tailored or more dressy and flared. Fur coats are being made up in this style, and the fur jacket is coming back both for afternoon and for sports wear. Several of the foremost Paris houses are showing fur jackets with dresses. A brown and yellow tweed frock, for instance, has a brown baby lamb jacket lined with the tweed.

Straightline coats, anywhere in full length models, and they occasionally carry the dip in the back.

The sketch illustrates the three types of coats. The first is in the silhouette of the three-quarter afternoon coat worn with the irregular hemline. The second is a jacket of fur by Chanel, with little rippling capes over the shoulders, and the third is a favorite model for the full length coat, also developed in fur. This last is of brown caracul in a wrap-around model, showing the princess influence, and slightly longer at the back and sides. The high standing collar is of blue fox, while the deep cuffs are of the caracul.

Straightline coats, anywhere seen among the tweed ensembles. The color contrast is not so often seen in the afternoon ensembles. Fur borders are a feature of many short afternoon coats. It is in the evening wraps that we again meet the contrast of color. Maggy Rouff and Lelong endorse the fashion of white evening frocks under wraps of some rich shade of velvet, deep violet, for instance.

In the full length coats many of the morning models remain straightline and are belted. In none of the coats in the princess line over-emphasized, though its influence is strongly felt. The flare been regarded as an insurgent in the ranks of banking heads because of his action in "saving the market" in August by rushing in a supply of call money (at 20 per cent) and thus incurring the condemnation of the powers-that-be behind the reserve system and certain senatorial cliques at Washington. His sensational achievement in raising the resources of the city bank from upon a billion dollars to two and a quarter billions over a period of seven years, and making it the world's biggest banking institution, doubtless entitles Mr. Mitchell to more than ordinary consideration in dealing with these great problems.

Mr. Mitchell was quoted this week as saying that though in some cases speculation has gone too, far, the American stock markets are in healthy condition. Many of the industrial stocks, he says, are now at price levels which would have been considered sound and conservative even by the standards of ten years ago, and stock values at present have a sound basis in the general prosperity of our country. Mr. Mitchell, it need hardly be said is a bull.

Colonel Ayers elects to emphasize, in his statement, the bad behavior of the market since the end of January, rather than indulge in any broad forecast of its probable action this year. The "creeping bear market," concealed in part by the enthusiastic sky-rocketing of a few favored industrials and utilities, he tells us, has steadily and persistently carried prices of more than 50 per cent of listed stocks to lower, lower, lowest, levels. Thousands of speculators in New York and elsewhere need no reminder of that fact. Their inability to make an honest penny in the market, while their slender resources gradually dwindle to the vanishing point, is evidence aplenty of their faulty judgment in picking the winners in an extremely selective market.

The sages have spoken. In principle, they are in agreement. Without healthy industrial and financial conditions there can be no prosperity, and without prosperity security prices cannot rise. In the last analysis, corporation earnings are the only safe yard stick of security values, and thus once again we have had presented the danger of placing too high an appraisal on prospects.

The daily swing of prices on the stock exchange reflects chiefly the play of swiftly changing economic and market factors on speculative opinion. Without a wide variety of opinion there would be no horse races, no dog fights and no stock market. As long as opinions vary, some traders will go short on stock which others believe to be cheap at the price. When great minds differ, there is little ground for criticism of apparent inconsistencies of men of smaller calibre.

CHATTY— GODDESS OF CAB

CHAPTER LVII

Chatty's new position, she soon found, was a very responsible one, and demanded much more attention than did the phones in Mr. Van Nuys' office.

The firm was larger, to begin with. Three phone girls instead of one were required to do much more than merely make connections.

"You must learn the names of all the customers," her instructor told her, "and be able to recognize their voice. To be able to say 'yes, Mr. Jones,' or 'I'll find out for you, Mr. Smith' is a great asset to you, and helps the office. Customers like to be recognized. It makes them feel important."

Chatty found herself occupied in a new way; learning to listen instead of talk; listening, not to see what she could find out to tell, but to memorize and be useful.

"It isn't enough just to tell Mr. Smith that whoever he wants isn't here. You must make an effort to find him!" was another maxim laid down for her. "Tell the customer you will try to locate the man he wants. Never leave his line more than thirty seconds without speaking to him; say 'I'm trying to locate Mr. Tolson, Mr. Smith.' Be pleasant. Have a smile in your voice. A good telephone girl makes friends for the firm. And if you are good at it, they'll pay you well!"

Chatty discovered that the senior girl on the telephone desk was paid eighteen hundred a year; not because she was any better operator than any other girl, but because of her tact, sympathy, understanding, memory for names and attractive way of speaking.

Chatty made up her mind that she, too, would learn to be worth eighteen hundred a year.

It was not done without effort. Old habits are not broken off short without a protest.

There was plenty of opportunity to gossip. Over the phone came all sorts of news; friendly news, gossip news, scandalous news. Chatty had the impulse to discuss it with the other girls, to tell the interesting things she overheard.

But she did not. Nor did she commit the sin of "listening in" except for business purposes. It was very difficult, sometimes, not to do so; when Mr. Tolson called a woman on the phone, for instance, Chatty wanted very much to know whether it was business or—not business. Mr. Tolson was married.

But she sternly repressed the desire.

"I got into all the trouble I'm ever going to get in!" she told herself. "I do no more listening, talking, chattering!"

When the girls in the office came to her for information they received a smile and an "I'm sorry, I don't know, really—"

They soon learned that the "new girl" was "not a talker."

"You'll get small change out of Chatty!" she heard one girl say to another. "She just doesn't—or won't—tell anything!"

Chatty smiled, well pleased.

It was not the reputation she had had, before.

Chatty was lonely.

Billie married was Billie extra sweet and kind—but George demanded much time and attention. Instead of seeing her almost every day, Chatty saw her once a week.

Winnie, married, had gone to another city to live.

Agnes called her up once a week to ask her how she was getting along. But, Agnes, too, had her own interests, and there was no reason, reflected Chatty, why Agnes, who had been forgiving and kind, should make an intimate friend of her.

Her mother—oh, well, mothers are mothers! Dear and kind and sweet, but belonging to another generation, and not wholly understanding this one. Chatty could not open all her heart to her mother, as she might to Billie had Billie not had her hands and heart full of the business of being a bride and establishing a new home.

Billie was full of news—of furniture and wall paper, rugs and wedding presents, George's manifold perfections. She was not—at least to Chatty's lonely heart—approachable with sorrowful confidences about being hungry, hungry for something she could not have—

It was not an easy time for Chatty. Had she not, deep down in her heart, possessed real character and real courage, she might easily have fallen a prey to some skillful wooer of the Bryant Dunning type.

She had many chances to "go out on a party." The bond salesmen here were no different from those elsewhere; many of them young, good looking, unattached, anxious for a good time, and with plenty of money to buy it.

But Chatty turned her back on all such offers. She saw none among them whose image could compare to that enshrined in black in her heart. And she would not again cheapen herself by trading kisses for dances, petting parties or a wild time, necking for liquor.

"No thank you, I don't think I will—" was her invariable answer to those who begged her to go on a joy ride, or an expedition to the Lollypop Inn.

She hated the very thought of the Lollypop. When George bought Billie a little car, and Billie in the kindness of her heart, asked Chatty if she would like to drive it, Chatty shuddered away from the idea.

"I never, never, never want to sit at the wheel again!" she cried. "Oh, Billie, suppose, suppose those had not healed!"

She pointed to to the scars on Billie's face—the scars that soon would no longer be scars.

Chatty tried not to get morbid.

But there was that in her heart which made it very difficult not to be.

Continual thinking of one subject, one unattainable desire, is apt to make anyone morbid.

David was never long out of Chatty's thoughts. She found his name, now and then, in the paper; he was elected president of the local chapter of bank clerks; he was elected a director of the bank; he was talked of as vice president of the Civic Association.

She looked guilty, both ways, then stopped to examine it, her heart in her eyes. If she could only have one for her own!

But she did not try to buy one. She knew that the photographer might ask questions. To have David know that she had tried to buy his picture—that would, indeed, be the uttermost shame.

Every day for nine days thereafter she went to the show case, to look at his picture.

After the ninth day it was gone. Another man's face was in its place.

Chatty felt as if something lovely had been taken from her life.

Chatty's dress and facial make up underwent as drastic a change as her mental outlook. She used but a tiny bit of rouge, a little powder. The mascara she threw away. Her skirts were no longer shorter than the style. She bought quieter things.

"I'll be as much as I can what he used to like!" she told herself. "It's all I can do for him."

But then came a voice over the telephone which made it harder to bear; David's voice!

Chatty could have recognized it among a million. Habit is strong; having been taught to answer phone calls by names when possible she said, "Yes, Mr. Jordon, I'll find him for you," when he asked for Mr. Tolson.

"How do you know my name?" he shot back over the phone. Evidently he had not recognized her voice.

"Did I make a mistake?" she apologized. "I was quite sure—I'm sorry!"

"No mistake. I'm Jordon. But I don't understand—"

"This is Chatty," she answered, simply. "Here is Mr. Tolson now—" Chatty cut out her key so she could not hear that tormenting, lovely, desired voice.

Her hands trembled so that it was hard to make the next phone connection.

David now knew where she worked. And—he had found it out without her meaning to tell him—it just happened that way. Would anything else happen? Inside of Chatty a queer little half hope formed. If he called up, might he not sometimes come to the office—on business?

(TO EE CONTINUED)

"fixers," gunmen, racketeers and sluggers. The organization has been functioning smoothly for a long time.

The equipment of the syndicate included six vessels in regular service between the Atlantic coast, Canada and Bermuda. Each vessel was equipped to carry 3,000 cases of liquor. The contraband was taken off near the American shores by speed boats and delivered to trucks at obscure points.

Four raids were made in New York City, where the syndicate maintained sales headquarters in West Forty-Third St., not far from Broadway. Most of the raids were along the New Jersey coast line. The biggest seizure of men and material was made at "headquarters," at Highlands, N. J.

The stronghold of the organization at Highlands was equipped like a fort. On a hill, overlooking the approaches to the place, were machine guns imbedded in concrete. A view of the surrounding country could be obtained from a cupola lookout atop the house. There were underground trenches and big garages for the storing of trucks.

For months, the federal authorities have been trying to break up the ring. The first inkling that such a lawless group of bootleggers were operating came through an insistent radio sending station near Highlands, which never gave its license number in its messages. The messages were intercepted and, after much effort, decoded. Soon the authorities knew all about the syndicate's boats, their operators, their method of procedure and their properties.

Radio operator MacMaster was caught at his post. A mile from the wireless station a large body of agents climbed to a hill-top and seized a veritable fortress. Sawed-off shot-guns, sub-machine guns, tear gas bombs and a variety of pistols were among the material captured. A big cave in the side of the hill apparently was used for storage purposes.

Along the 200-mile stretch of coast line embraced by the government operations, warehouses, landing stages, storage buildings and sales rooms fell into the hands of the authorities in the simultaneously-staged raids.

"Mannie" Kessler's arrest was a surprise. It had been thought that since his release from Atlanta, where he had served a two-year term for bootlegging, he had "gone straight." He was once known as the wealthiest bootlegger in the world. He "did time" in Atlanta at the same time George Remus, the Cincinnati "king of the bootleggers," served his sentence there. They were friends. Remus, since he was acquitted in the murder of his wife, Imogene, has been in no way identified with bootlegging. He is living quietly in Cincinnati.

Kessler was credited with having amassed a fortune of $10,000,000 when he was sentenced to Atlanta but he insisted when he was released that it was "only paper." He had lived in luxury when his bootlegging operations were at their height. Lamps were "Mannie's" passion. He was forever attending auctions. In his rooms at a New York hotel he would have as many as ten lamps lit at a time.

EMPIRE AIR CIRCUS IN DEMONSTRATION HERE, ANNOUNCED

They include Major William C. Brooks, World War instructor who has flown in all parts of the United States and Canada during the last ten years; William Meyers, who barnstormed with Col. Lindbergh; Edward Nibur, formerly of the Gates Flying Circus and Ralph Haynes, who flew overseas during the World War.

The aviation society sponsoring the tour was formed in 1925 by twelve American members of the Royal Flying Corps, and now has more than 43,000 members in all parts of the United States, included on the roster are Roger Q. Williams and Lewis Yancey, Carence Chamberlin, Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, Gov. John Trumbull, of Connecticut, Bert Acosta and Bernt Balchen, all internationally known for their air feats.

It has been active in the formation of local flying clubs, in the construction of airports and in urging the establishment of airways. Thomas L. Hill, the president, now is campaigning for the government subsidy of flying schools, so that thousands of those who wish to learn to fly but cannot afford to pay present rates, will have the opportunity.

The Theater

Mrs. Lita Gray Chaplin, divorced second wife of Charlie Chaplin, film comedian, and Phil Baker, stage comedian, are engaged to be married, according to word received by friends in the movie colony.

Mrs. Chaplin is now in Milwaukee, Wis., on a vaudeville tour. Baker is widely known and for many years has been in the New York Winter Garden show under the direction of the Shuberts. He met Mrs. Chaplin, who is the mother of two children, in Hollywood two years ago.

Mrs. Chaplin was a film actress before her unhappy marriage to the "screen's greatest comedian" but their romance split on the rock of domestic incompatibility. Mrs. Chaplin has been filling a vaudeville engagement for a year, having appeared at Dayton last winter, where she was taken ill.

Hollywood, where many married women have careers, has undertaken to answer Adela Rogers St. John, magazine writer, who holds that the modern woman is a failure.

Most of the wives of film celebrities maintain that a woman can have a career and babies and do well by both. However, the concensus seems to be that the right woman, no matter how humble her lot, is the force that keeps the right man going.

Natalie Moorehead, actress, said girls try careers to soothe the pangs of disappointed love. Louise Fazenda, eccentric comedienne and character woman, finds her friends deserting careers to make homes, responding to life's oldest urge.

Ken Maynard, western star, thought if all women had good allowances there would be fewer of them striking out for themselves. Robert Armstrong's idea was that wealthy homes were more apt to hold the woman than humble ones, where housework is drudgery.

Mr. and Mrs. James Gleason did not exactly agree. The stage and screen comedian doffed a complimentary hat to the modern female and warned men to snap it up or lose their positions in the business world. Mrs. Gleason said that "men owe their positions in the business world to women. The successful men are all married."

Since men in real life are not notoriously sweet singers, barring a bathroom ditty or barbershop chord, why must actors in sound pictures have operatic voices? It's getting so Bull Montana will have to warble "Love's Old Sweet Song" or some other piece, if he gets a job in the films. Robert Armstrong will sing to Fannie Brice in "The Champ" and let the high notes fall where they list.

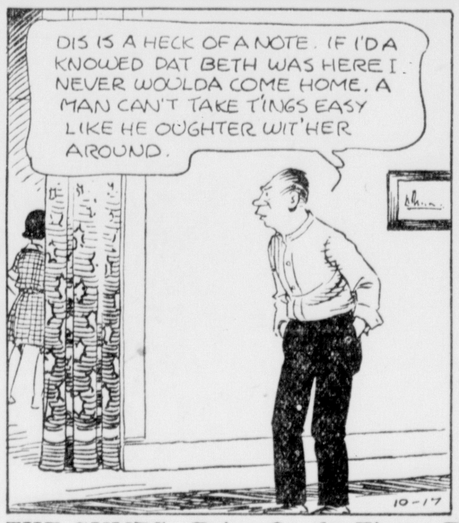

And here we have Miss Nancy Welford, all dressed up for her leading role in "Gold Diggers of Broadway." Looks as if she could dig gold out of misers, doesn't she?

MOST ATTRACTIVE FEATURING SCARFS

This time in reporting what is new in the line of fall accessories we'll start at the top and work down—for instance, first, we'll tell you about the new scarfs that smart women will wear; then in turn, we'll give you all the last minute information on jewelry, gloves, handbags, hosiery and shoes.

All Kinds of Scarfs

The scarfs of fall go to all lengths and designs to please the woman of fashion. Perhaps the most important scarf being shown by the local shops is one of Chanel's—finished with pointed and diagonal ends in both double and single thicknesses. Some of the scarfs are accompanied by a bag of the matching fabric. Checks, stripes and plaid designs seem to be the most in favor.

Large Silk Squares

Lanvin has sent us some large silk squares patterned with hand-blocked modern designs placed diagonally across the square as his contribution to the fall scarf mode. One we saw was of Copenhagen, navy blue and tan colorings and another was done in tan, brown and capucine.

New Jewelry Ideas

We predict that you will get just as much fun out of browsing around the new jewelry sections of the stores as we did. There are all sorts of new ideas offered for the new season and not the least among these are the semi-precious stones set in marcasite which to our way of thinking are fit for a queen and are really very inexpensive. The rings in particular took our eye and we saw some pendant necklaces that would be stunning for the matron.

Spanish Influence

No apparel or accessories seems to have escaped the influence of the Barcelona exposition in Spain—and certainly not jewelry. One very interesting necklace and bracelet set we saw as in combinations of metal with red, yellow and black predominating.

New Gloves

You will see much fancy stitching in the new fall gloves. You will also see that the tailored cuff type is the important type, featuring prominently leather appliques alone or in combination with a pearl blue button or a buckle trim.

Smart Handbags

The handbag buyers in the majority of the shops here informed us that it is their opinion that women will favor underarm and envelope types for fall. We should n't wonder, either, since the designers have made these two types so attractive. Bags with hookless fasteners and vagabond shapes in our humble opinion will be very important. Several of the finer bags we saw were of brown calf, offset by discreet bandings in darker tones. One of these had a metal fastening in gold and silver.

New Hosiery Shades

The hosiery colors for fall are greatly influenced by the furs that trim the new coats. There is a shade called rose dust that has a strong mauve influence and will harmonize beautifully with blue fox furs. This particular shade will also harmonize very nicely with the purple-red range of costume fabrics. Then there is mocca that was created to match brown fox furs. And so on.

Concerning Shoes

Sable brown and black are the big two in shoe colors for fall. The sable brown has a delightful beige cast and sable black assumes a gunmetal tone. Gunmetal, by the way, is invariably used as a trimming on black shoes.

Mrs. Eva Godfrey Mulligan, of New Milford, Conn., with her children, Joseph, seven; Leslie, three, and Agnes, five, after police had taken her two other boys, —Johnnie, nine, and Jimmie, seven, to the New Haven, Conn., jail, where they are said to have confessed to one of the most fiendish murders ever entered on a police blotter. According to the alleged confession of the two boys, it was they who tortured and then killed three-year-old Albert Mikenas, near New Milford, Conn., on July 29th. Police had been of the opinion that the little chap had been murdered by an arch fiend of powerful strength, but in view of the story told by the youngsters, they are inclined to believe that the mystery has been solved.

CONDUCT DRIVE TO BLOCK DIPHTHERIA

Under the supervision of Dr. R. H. Grube, county health commissioner, and Miss Pearl Wittenmeyer, county public health nurse, assisted by physicians of each community, many children of Bellbrook and Spring Valley schools have already been vaccinated against the disease, it is announced. The immunization campaign will next be carried to Jamestown schools.

In the next few days each pupil will be furnished a letter addressed to his parents or guardian, reading as follows:

"Woul you like to know that your children are protected from diphtheria? This can be done without expense to you if you will sign the permission slip attached to this letter.

"Nearly six hundred children die of diphtheria every year in Ohio and about 9,000 become seriously ill with the disease.

"Some children are naturally protected from diphtheria, many are not. Those who are protected can be separated from the susceptible by means of the Schick test, which consists of the injection of a drop of the test solution in the skin of the arm. A slight redness will appear on the arm of those who are not protected.

"Those who are not protected are given three injections of a protective mixture, each injection consisting of fifteen drops. In from three to six months 85 per cent of the children so injected will be protected from diphtheria. The test is harmless, so are the injections. Over two hundred thousand children have been Schick tested and more than one hundred and thirty thousand immunized in Ohio, and over six hundred and fifty thousand in New York without a single bad result. In New York six hundred lives a year have been saved by this means.

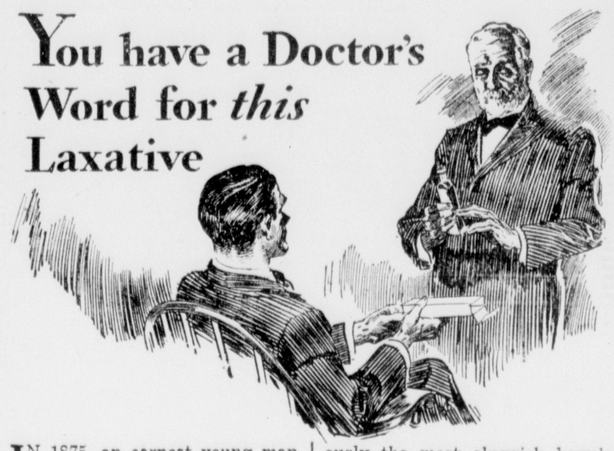

"Your children, who are too young to go to school, should also be protected. It is not necessary to Schick test them as nearly all children under six are susceptible. All children under ten years should be immunized without the preliminary Schick test. Ask your family physician for active immunization against diphtheria.

Japan, England, France, Belgium, Ireland, Scotland and several South American countries are expected to send delegates to the annual meeting of the American Bar Association, at Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 23. Gurney E. Newlin, left, Los Angeles attorney, is president of the association, and, Henry Upson Sims, Birmingham, Ala., right, regarded as a possible successor to Newlin in office.

You have a Doctor's Word for this Laxative

IN 1875, an earnest young man began to practice medicine. As a family doctor, he treated many cases of constipation. He soon saw the harm in common purges and began to seek something better. Out of his experience was born a famous prescription now in wide use.

This prescription was written thousands of times. It proved an ideal laxative for old and young. Children like its pleasant taste. Older people like it because it doesn't gripe or cause discomfort. It is a mixture of fresh herbs and other pure ingredients; thoroughly effective for the most robust of men. Stimulates the normal muscular action of the bowels. So its use will not become a habit. As people saw how marvelously the most sluggish bowels are started and bad breath, headaches, biliousness, feverishness, or no energy, poor appetite, etc., are relieved by Dr. Caldwell's prescription, it became necessary to put it up ready for use.

Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is the world's most popular laxative. All drug stores have the generous bottles. The product never varies from Dr. Caldwell's original formula. So you can take it with confidence or give it to the youngest child.
